Batteries—New York, Marquard and Meyers; Boston, O'Brien and Carrigan, Bedient and Cady.

Fenway, Park, Boston, Oct. 10.—The New York Giants turned the tables against Boston today, and the American Leaguers narrowly escaped a shutout in the second decisive game of the world's championship series.

It was not until the ninth inning that Boston broke into the run-getting. The score was: New York, 2; Boston, 1.

It was a play-off of the eleven-inning tie contest which ended by darkness yesterday, and no small portion of credit for the victory is due to the pitching of Rube Marquard, who was sent in by McGraw to oppose O'Brien, the Boston selection for the day.

The red hosed Bostons were the first on the field and as they trotted out from the players' bench for batting practice the stands cheered. Manager Stahl said O'Brien would probably be called on for box duty. The Giants came on the field soon after the Ameri-

Story of the Game by Innings.

FIRST INNING.

First Half—The first pitch was a ball. Devore got a single to center, after having three balls and two strikes called on him. Doyle flied out to Speaker. It was an attempt at the hit and run play. Devore was out, stealing, Carrigan to Wagner. Devore was blocked six feet off the bag. Snodgrass out on a fly to Speaker. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Half—Hooper flied out to Fletcher. Marquard had good speed and a fast breaking curve. Yerkes was out on strikes. The crowd cheered Speaker as he came to the plate. Speaker was out, Doyle to Merkle. No runs, no hits, no errors.

SECOND INNING.

First Half—Murray made a two base hit to right center. Merkle sacrificed and was out, O'Brien to Stahl. Murray went to third on the play. Murray scored on Herzog's sacrifice fly to Hooper, whose throw to the plate failed to catch the fleet New York fielder. Meyers was out, Gradner to Stahl. One run, one hit, no errors.

Second Half—Lewis shot a hot single to center. Marquard tried to catch Lewis off first and the Red Sox called "balk," but it was not allowed by the umpire. Gardner sacrificed, Herzog to Merkle, Lewis taking second. Stahl went out on a high fly to Murray. Wagner struck out. No runs, one hit, no errors.

THIRD INNING.

First Half—Fletcher took his base on balls. O'Brien was unsteady and could not control his moist ball. Marquard sacrificed, O'Brien to Stahl. Devore fanned. Doyle lined a fly to Stahl; a foot either way and it would have been a three base hit. No runs, no hits, no errors.

DIES FROM PROLONGED ATTACK OF HICCOUGHS.

Elwood, Ind., Oct. 10.—B. F. Trick is dead, northwest of the city, after suffering several weeks with an attack of hiccoughs. Trick was a physical giant, standing six feet, ten inches in his stocking feet, and weighed more than 200 pounds, but his malady caused him to waste away almost to a skeleton. Trick introduced short horn cattle into this community and was one of the most successful stock growers in this part of the state.

EVICTED MINERS DECLINE ALL AID

Refuse Free Transportation and Families Camp by Roadside.

FEAR NEW TROUBLE

Charleston, W. Va., Oct. 10.—The military in control of the martial law section of the Kanawha coal field feared trouble today as evictions of striking miners and their families continued under direction of the civil authorities.

Heretofore the miners have accepted free transportation for their household effects and their families, but those evicted from company houses at Dakota and Kayford on Cabin creek, refused assistance and compelled the deputy sheriffs to pile their effects in the public road while the women and children camped by the roadside.

This action the military fear will arouse public indignation, and precautions are being taken against an outbreak.

TRIP IS WEARING ON GOV. WILSON

Nominee Arrives in Chicago Tired and Hoarse But Highly Pleased.

ENTHUSIASM FOR HIM

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Tired and hoarse, Gov. Woodrow Wilson reached Chicago at 10 o'clock today and faced with considerable doubt a program of speeches. His voice is almost gone and the governor feared that he would be able to do no more than greet the crowds at some of the places where addresses had been scheduled.

"No human voice could reach some of those big masses of people," he said. It was a source of regret to the nominee that he found his trip swelled into twice the size originally planned. Speeches were inserted by local committees and trains stopped sometimes without giving the governor any advance information so that he was compelled to appear.

Deeply gratified by his reception in the last eight days, the governor said, however, that this probably would be his last big trip of the campaign. The governor wired to Acting Chairman McAdoo in New York positively to make no more speaking dates until he could talk with him personally.

"They didn't wish to hear me speak, but only to see me," said the governor of the crowds at St. Louis and Kansas City. "Somehow political meetings at which speeches are expected should be limited in attendance."

The street parade here for the candidate was a big one and enthusiasm along the line was pronounced. Gov. Wilson was expected to speak at the Southern club shortly after his arrival, then in a downtown theater and later at the Iroquois club. During the afternoon a public reception was on the program.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of schools, gave permission to teachers to close their classes a half hour earlier than usual in order to give those who so desired an opportunity to attend the public reception.

BRYAN IN NORTH DAKOTA.

Talks to Women at Fargo on High Cost of Living.

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 10.—Wm. Jennings Bryan arrived here this morning after spending all of yesterday in southern and central North Dakota, making speeches in behalf of the democratic national ticket at Lamoure, Oakes, Ellendale and Jamestown. Here he addressed a large crowd of women on the high cost of living. In the afternoon he held an open air meeting in the public park. Tonight Mr. Bryan will speak in Grand Forks.

HIS MEMORY VERY FAULTY

Mr. Archbold Has Difficulty in Recalling Many Letters.

OIL MAGNATE IS AGAIN A WITNESS

Famous Archbold Letters Up Once More in Campaign Fund Inquiry.

NOT PLEASANT THING TO LOOK AT, SAYS ARCHBOLD.

Washington, Oct. 10.—John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil company, testified to the Clapp committee today that a receipt the late Cornelius N. Bliss gave him for the company's $100,000 contribution to the Roosevelt campaign fund of 1904 had been destroyed just before the death of H. H. Rogers. "It was not a thing of pleasure to look at," said Archbold.

Washington, Oct. 10.—John D. Archbold, of the Standard Oil company, testified again today before the Clapp committee investigating campaign funds. His examination related to the "Archbold letters" between himself and former Senators Foraker, Quay and Hanna and former Representatives Grosvenor and Sibley.

Certificates of deposit sent to Mr. Foraker, he said, were for payment of legal services to the Standard Oil company in Ohio, "that and nothing more."

Some of the letters said to have been written to him by the men named Mr. Archbold could not remember having received but was not prepared to say he had not. Of his own letters, his most frequent answer was, "I have no doubt I wrote it." Mr. Archbold did not deny the authorship of any.

A letter of Oct. 30, 1902, to Quay, Mr. Archbold said he had no doubt he wrote. The letter enclosed a certificate of deposit for $10,000 and set forth that Senator Quay "had recently said some things disagreeable about me for which I think you should be ashamed."

"Can you state what that $10,000 was for?" asked Senator Clapp.

For Some Campaign Fund.

"Of course, my recollection is vague," said Mr. Archbold, "but it was for some campaign fund, some Pennsylvania state matter."

Chairman Clapp showed Mr. Archbold a reproduction of a three-page letter purporting to have been written by Sibley, Feb. 26, 1905, in which he said he "had talked with Mr. B., a democrat," who was prepared to make a fight against certain legislation. He suggested that Mr. Archbold have a conference with the "senator" and suggested that he could arrange to have the latter go to New York.

"A man who wrote as long a letter as that ought to be killed," said Mr. Archbold under his breath. "I have no recollection of it," he added, "but I have no doubt I received it."

"You were in correspondence with Mr. Sibley" asked Chairman Clapp.

"Oh, yes, a great deal," said Mr. Archbold.

The Sibley letter added: "If you think of anything I could do let me know, but I think the members of the house of representatives and the speaker understand the situation."

Senator Clapp proceeded to the identification of another letter Feb. 18, 1900, purporting to have been written by Mr. Archbold to the late Senator M. S. Quay, of Pennsylvania.

Through the Santa Fe.

"I have no doubt I wrote it," he said.

GARRETT MEN DIE IN WRECK

Engineer Reneman and Fireman Leland Killed at Chicago Junction.

B. & O. TRAIN HITS ENGINE IN YARDS

Five Mail Clerks Hurt and Passengers Severely Shaken Up.

Chicago Junction, Ohio, Oct. 10.—Engineer Frank Reneman and Fireman Joseph Leland, both of Garrett, Ind., were killed and five mail clerks were seriously injured at 4 o'clock this morning when Baltimore and Ohio passenger train, No. 14, eastbound from Chicago to New York, ran into a yard engine left on the main track here.

Brakeman Harry Ashley, of Chicago Junction, sustained a broken collar bone and other members of the train crew were more or less seriously injured.

It was first reported that two passengers had been killed, but this proved to be only a rumor. Several passengers in the front coaches, however, were injured. The passenger train was running at a fair rate of speed and it is believed that the yard engine was almost hidden by a dense fog. The engine and two mail cars were derailed.

Was Well Known.

Engineer Reneman was fifty-nine years of age. He was well known, and was one of the oldest engineers, in point of service, on this division of the B. & O., having operated an engine for more than twenty-five years. His home has been at Garrett for many years. He is survived by the widow and four children, Louis, William, Essa and Pansy Reneman, all of whom reside at home.

Little is known of Mr. Leland, the fireman. He was about twenty-eight years of age and had lived at Garrett only a short time. It is believed that his home was in Michigan.

WILL RAISE POLE IF IT DON'T RAIN

Democratic Political Meeting Will Not Be Called Off.

EXPECT A BIG CROWD

In spite of threatening weather for this evening, the democratic rally and pole raising will not be postponed, and the program will be carried out according to previous announcements.

A big platform has been erected on Spy Run avenue near State street, and the addresses will be delivered by Frank Dunten, chairman of the Lagrange county committee; Senator Stephen B. Fleming and Judge R. K. Erwin.

A hickory pole, 125 feet in length will be raised and will be illuminated by numerous electric lights. L. A. Centlivre will preside and introduce the speakers.

For a time this afternoon Chairman Niezer, of the speaking committee thought it would be necessary to postpone the event until a later date, but inquiry at the weather bureau gave the information that it will not rain, and unless it is really pouring, so to speak, the demonstration will be held.

Mrs. Herman Pollak, of West Berry street, is slowly recovering from an operation which she underwent at St. Joseph's hospital a short time ago.

The Tale of a Traveler

"I BELIEVE the Holy Land is one of the most interesting spots on the globe," asserted B. Paul Mossman in recounting his experiences abroad.

"On every hand one encounters unexpected wonders, which make the visit to Palestine a continuous period of interest.

"I remember, as we were returning to Jerusalem from a day spent on the shores of the Dead sea, that the party of travelers was overtaken by a pelting rain. It got dark suddenly, for it was after night fall. We happened to be in one of those regions where shelter was not close at hand, but we hurried as fast as we could to reach a Turkish kahn, which our guides knew was on a little way ahead. It was a water-soaked but rejoicing party that made a rush for the shelter. Outside, the rain came down in torrents, and the darkness was intense. But inside, it was dry and comfortable and when we had removed the wettest of our clothes we sat down to rest.

"Well, it continued to rain and rain and rain, and we found it agreeable to get ready to spend the night there. The ladies in the party took one of the two rooms which the place afforded, while the men took the other. We made ourselves as comfortable as we could, lying on a bare floor and all of us, I believe, fell asleep. I remember I was awakened by a peculiar sensation—a strange, annoying, itching sensation.

Moving Toward Jerusalem.

"'Bugs!' cried the entire party in almost one voice.

"Well, sir, you should have seen us get out of there. We forgot the rain, we forgot the darkness and the mud, we forgot the possibility of highwaymen — but we certainly did get out. The caravan was soon moving quietly toward Jerusalem, and I believe the thoughts of its members were not of the same temperament as the thousands who had gone before, singing praises to the earthly city of Zion."

WENT TO DEATH TO SAVE BABE

One Dead, Three Others Injured in Chicago Auto Collision.

FIVE TAKE A CHANCE

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Faced with the alternative of striking a woman with a babe in her arms or meeting possible death or injury in a collision with a street car, five men in a speeding automobile yesterday chose the latter course.

The woman and child were saved, but one man laid down his life and three others were seriously injured. The automobile party was on its way to the sox-cubs baseball game.

The dead. Christopher Fietz, a bricklayer, of 328 West Forty-third street; riding in rear of automobile in standing position; head crushed.

The injured: Michael Ryan, 18 years old, of 636 West Sixty-first street, skull fracture, condition serious, taken to St. Bernard's hospital; John Craven, 18 years old, of 4747 Shields avenue, bruised, went home unassisted; Fred W. Miller, of 215 West Forty-third street, bruised and may have suffered skull fracture, taken to office of Dr. J. W. Packard, 4259 Wentworth avenue, and later home.

The automobile was driven by John Reilly, 22 years old, of 4104 Indiana avenue, who was not injured. He is being sought by the police.

Turns Into Car's Path.

At the time of the collision two men were standing on the rear of the machine, holding to the rear seats.

The automobile had just turned from the path of a north-bound Wentworth avenue car. Without slackening its speed it continued north on the track used by the south-bound street cars.

At Forty-fifth place, while the automobile continued to speed, a woman with a child in her arms stepped in front of the machine.

Without a moment's hesitation Reilly veered to the north-bound track and into the path of an oncoming street car, to avoid striking the woman. Witnesses assert their belief that he thought he could cross the tracks in front of the car.

But a few feet behind the automobile, the car struck and shattered its rear wheel, then wrecking the entire machine. Occupants were thrown headlong to the pavement and lay in the wreckage.

Woman's Name Not Known.

The crew of the street car was not taken into custody, as witnesses testified that its members were no at fault, the occupants of the automobile deliberately choosing possible death rather than the chance of striking the woman and baby, whose names are not known.

The automobile is the property of George W. Spangle, of 4359 Prairie avenue.

OLD TIME DEBATE HELD IN ABOITE

Moosers and Democrats Jointly Address a Large Audience.

THE OTHER MEETINGS

Democrats and bull moosers of Aboite township were treated to an old fashioned political debate last night when they gathered at Center school house. By reason of a misunderstanding both the progressives and democrats had billed a meeting for the school house, and after this became known, a mutual agreement was made for the debate. The little building was filled to its utmost capacity and Lee J. Hartzell and L. N. Jackman set forth the interests of the bull moosers, while the democratic party was represented by Charles M. Niezer and Stephen Callahan.

Lauding Roosevelt, Johnson and Beveridge, Mr. Hartzell opened the argument. He referred to Roosevelt as the greatest living American, and the modern Moses. Mr. Callahan, the next orator, attacked both the republican and progressive national platforms in attempting to show the lack of executive ability on the part of Mr. Taft, and the inconsistency of Theodore Roosevelt.

Mr. Jackman, father of C. F. Jackman, progressive nominee for attorney general, went after Governor Marshall and other leading democrats, alleging that the candidates this year on both the state and national tickets, are direct products of the bosses. He also spoke in unfavorable terms about the "Marshall constitution" and ended by declaring Woodrow Wilson to be one of the latest and best educated playthings the bosses ever enjoyed.

Charles M. Niezer, speaking in the interests of the democracy told some very interesting things about the alleged sincerity of Roosevelt, and spent more than a half hour in telling of Roosevelt's ambitions to make the people believe that he is the only man in this great world who can occupy the highest seat in the nation without becoming affiliated with the bosses. He then went after Flynn, of Pittsburg, and George W. Perkins, who have manifested so much interest in the Roosevelt candidacy.

Nothing but a friendly feeling was manifested at the close of the meeting, and at the conclusion of the debate, the moosers perfected the organization of a branch Roosevelt club. Ernest Bulker was elected president, Frank Esterfield vice president, and William Ihrig secretary.

JOHN C. CHENEY SPEAKS.

Talks to Republican of the Tenth Ward.

About thirty-five men attended a meeting held Wednesday night at Bowser's hall in the Tenth ward, and listened to addresses by Former Congressman John C. Cheney, of Sullivan, Ind.; Charles R. Lane, republican nominee for congress; Frank Moore, Judge Sol A. Wood, John W. Garman and John Ehle.

Mr. Cheney was the principal speaker and discussed at some length the republican issues of the present campaign. Mr. Cheney will speak this evening at Butler, DeKalb county.

BIG DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

Open Air Meeting Postponed on Account of Rain.

Democrats of St. Joseph township were addressed last night by Judge John H. Aiken and Attorney William Freuchtenicht. Both speakers devoted their time to the different campaign issues. Mr. Freuchtenicht discussed the tariff and went into detail on the state democratic platform. Mr. Aiken went after the republican policies of national government. Other speakers present were A. C. Gladieux, William C. Schwier and Allen Hursh.

Declaring that the high tariff born and fostered by the republican party has been directly responsible for the formation of law defying trusts, John W. Eggeman, democratic candidate for circuit judge spoke to the voters who last night attended the meeting held at 1425 West Main street. He pointed out the faults of the present system of taxation, and closed his address by citing some of the benefits derived through the democratic administration in Indiana.

Attorney Guy Colerick was another speaker and he very ably entertained those present by quoting different expressions made by Colonel Roosevelt and Mr. Taft, four years ago, and during the present campaign. His remarks tended to show the inconsistency of both the bull moose and the republican presidential candidates.

On account of inclement weather, the open air meeting slated for the democrats at the coroner of Lafayette and Pontiac street, was postponed. The gathering was to have been addressed by Congressman Cyrus Cline and District Chairman Edward G. Hoffman.

ORGANIZE SINGING SOCIETY.

Kedehum, Richard Daenell, Walter Poetzsch, John Loebel, Otto Schubert, Alfred Hochn, Eugene Wolf, Gustave Ludwig, Carl Schindler, Otto Rolland, Arthur Stubnatzi, Joseph Ludwig, Emil Haberkorn and Arthur Zaspel.

Emil Haberkorn, chairman of the educational committee, has received instructions to call a number of special meetings this winter, in which lectures and addresses pertaining to matters of general interest will be given.

IN A DISPUTE OVER FIGURES

Express Companies See $33,000,000 Loss Under New Rate.

SHIPPERS FIGHT PLEA

Washington, Oct. 10.—A loss of $33,000,000 a year in the revenues of the express companies and the railroads would result from putting into effect the express rates proposed by the interstate commerce commission, according to figures submitted by the companies to the commission yesterday at a public hearing.

This loss, it was estimated, would be substantially evenly divided between the express and the railroad companies.

The hearing was attended by about 300 representatives of express and railway companies and by attorneys for many commercial organizatons and shippers. The shippers generally approved the commission's suggested rates, although in one or two instances they were thought to be high.

Walker D. Hines, counsel for the express companies, declared that the proposed rates would cost the express companies 5.87 cents on every dollar received by them, "thus destroying all profit and producing enormous deficits." The deficit, he said, for the companies he represented would total $6,743,022 annually, measured by the present volume of business.

Cites Parcels Post.

The express companies' counsel urged that in view of the enactment of the parcels post law since the commission's rates were proposed—"a law that vitally affects the express companies"—the commission should make no order at this time prescribing new express rates.

General counsel for several important railroads, including, among others, C. C. Wright of the Chicago & Northwestern; E. C. Lindley of the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, and S. D. Bledsoe of the Santa Fe, maintained the railroads ought to be heard before definite action was taken that would affect their revenues to the extent of $16,000,000 a year.

Several representatives of shippers were heard, including J. I. Brown of the California Commercial association, H. C. Barlow of the Chicago Association of Commerce, E. E. Williamson of the Association of Mail Order Liquor Dealers, and James L. Cowles of the Postal Progress League. Mr. Barlow thought the hundred-pound rate from New York to Chicago ought not to exceed $2, the commission's rate being $2.40. General approval of the rates was expressed except by Mr. Cowles, who attacked the zone system adopted by the commission and insisted upon a uniform rate for all distances.

The hearing before the commission may be concluded today.

SCHOOLS SHOW INCREASE.

Enrollment is 300 Greater Than in October Last Year.

The schools of Fort Wayne have experienced an increase of 296 children over the enrollment at this time last year. The total number of pupils enrolled in the ninteen schools of the city is 7,042, as compared with 6,746 in October last year.

The James H. Smart school, a recent addition to the school buildings of the city, ranks second in the number of children enrolled in the graded schools. This is surprising to many, because of the recent opening of this school. The Bloomingdale school leads the graded schools in the number of pupils enrolled with 652. The high school, however, leads all with 819. The Adams schools brings up the rear with 130. The normal school has 21 students' names on its books this year.

BIG DIRIGIBLE EXPLODES.

Germany's Aerial Fleet Suffers a Severe Loss.

Berlin, Oct. 10.—Germany's aerial fleet suffered a severe loss today by the total wrecking by explosion of one of its immense military dirigible balloons and of the hall in which it was stationed at Reinickendorf, a suburb of Berlin.

The dirigible, which was of the semi-rigid type with internal air balloonets to preserve its shape, invented by Major Gross of the Prussian army, was being refilled with hydrogen gas by soldiers of the flying corps. The gas, which is highly inflammable, was being passed into the envelop from metal cylinders, when the friction of the gas itself on the filling tube caused fire to break out. A violent explosion ensued, completely destroying the dirigible and blowing the hall to splinters. None of the company was injured.

TELEGRAMS HAVE BEEN DESTROYED

Will Cripple Government's Case Against Accused Dynamiters.

HELD AS IMPORTANT

Indianapolis, Oct. 10.—Managers of telegraphic offices at Spokane, Seattle, Portland and San Francisco testified at the "dynamite conspiracy" trial today that telegrams sought by the government had been destroyed.

J. B. Coggins, San Francisco, was asked to produce a telegram reading "clean house" and "sent by Eugene A. Clancy from Boston to 27 Excelsior avenue, San Francisco." Coggins said the telegraph files had been destroyed.

The government charges that on reading of the loss of life at the Los Angeles Times disaster, Clancy, then on a visit to Boston, decided to destroy certain evidence relative to various Pacific coast explosions and that he sent a "clean house" message both to his home and to his labor headquarters. The other telegrams sought, the government attorneys state, were between Olaf A. Tvietmoe, San Francisco, and J. B. McNamara before the latter went to Los Angeles.

A telegram sent by Ortie E. McManigal on March 23, 1911, from Omaha, Neb., to J. J. McNamara, Indianapolis, was produced. It read: "Kindly send me hundred dollar check to Lincoln, Neb. R. Woods."

This, according to McManigal, was agreed upon as the signal that he was ready to blow up the new court house at Omaha, so J. J. McNamara could instruct J. B. McNamara to blow up a plant at Columbus, Ind., the same night.

Henry W. Legleitner, now of Denver, was alleged to have sent from Pittsburg a telegram saying: "Can I come to headquarters? Important." This was, according to the government's charge, a short time before Legleitner appeared at the iron workers' headquarters in Indianapolis with a fibroid suit case in which nitroglycerin had been carried.

GREET RILEY IN OLD HOME TOWN

School Children and Elderly Folk Celebrate Poet's Birthday.

EVENT WAS NOTABLE

Greenfield, Ind., Oct. 10.—Coming from his present home in Indianapolis to the home of his boyhood, Greenfield, in an auto, accompanied by a few friends, and met at the city limits by teachers and hundreds of school children, who pelted him with flowers until the car was full, James Whitcomb Riley, Hoosier poet, was yesterday accorded a reception in his native city that will never be forgotten.

Accompanying Mr. Riley on this, his birthday, trip to the place of his birth were Henry and Edmund Eitel, Dr. C. B. McCulloch and Samuel McCoy, of Indianapolis. At the edge of the city which was reached at about 10:30 o'clock, they found the school children in gay attire, with banners flying, drawn up at each side of the road to give the first greeting to their great and good friend. Public buildings, business houses and private dwellings were decorated in honor of "Riley day," and the few hours spent by the poet and his friends in the city were devoted to merrymaking.

March to Court House.

With the high school students leading, the pupils formed in rank and fell in behind the car for the march to the court house, the local band leading the way. The high school pupils bore a banner with "The Old Swimmin' Hole" painted on it, the work of the art instructor, Miss Genevieve Ingebus. The departmental pupils, who followed, bore a banner that had a pen-an-ink sketch of Riley. Each school also had a banner bearing its name and each child carried an American flag.

When the court house was reached Mayor Ora Meyer made a few introductory remarks and was followed by William R. Hough, who made the welcoming address. Capt. Henry Snow spoke of "The Ties in Greenfield." "Reminiscences" was the subject of George A. Carr. John F. Mitchell spoke of "Boyhood Days," and Will A. Hough of "Riley."

THREE MILES OF ELEVATED TRACK

Wabash Abandons Surface Tracks from Hugo to Broadway.

RELAYING WATER PIPE

Three miles of surface track between Hugo and the Broadway intersection have been abandoned by the Wabash Railroad company, which has completed the elevation of its road bed for that distance and is ready to put it into service at once.

This work has been rushed by the railroad company so as to insure that the subway at Broadway can be open during the winter months and with a few weeks of good weather conditions at the crossing will be as good as the city administration had expected to have them.

The east car track under the elevation is out of service so that the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company can make the excavation necessary to accommodate its freight cars, and while this is being carried on the Wabash company will relay the water pipe. East of Broadway some industrial tracks are being constructed.

AFTER COPS WHO WINK AT DIVES

Chicago Anti-Vice Crusade Broadening Out in Its Scope.

WAYMAN VERY BUSY

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Indictment of Chicago policemen was considered yesterday as one possibility in State's Attorney Wayman's anti-vice campaign. Investigators for the state's attorney in the afternoon got positive evidence, it is said, that a number of dives in the segregated district were operating in defiance of the prosecutor's closing orders.

Mr. Wayman, after ending his raids, asked Chief of Police McWheeny to station men in the vice district to keep the places closed, announcing that his detectives henceforth would simply keep a check on conditions.

Some of the police patrol are said to be winking at the dives and allowing them to operate on the quiet. Mr. Wayman was out of the city during the day, but before his departure he is said to have stated that he would see that the police kept the places closed.

Easy to Indict Policemen, It is Said.

Reports that the prosecutor expected to compel the police department to carry out his orders under penalty of indictment were heard during the day. Attorneys said that as the operation of dives was in direct violation of the state law the only thing necessary to have any "winking" policeman indicted for malfeasance in office would be evidence to indicate the policeman knew a dive is in operation.

At the request of the state's attorney the city council some months ago passed an ordinance making all members of the police force city officials. This measure was suggested to the prosecutor because heretofore certain policemen escaped bribery indictment because technically they were not city officials.

While no member of the police force from the chief down openly has stated he would refuse to obey the state's attorney's closing orders, practically all policemen are opposed to the anti-segregation campaign and are not eager to enforce the county official's orders.

After Owners of Property.

Acting State's Attorney Thomas Marshall today will begin the inquiry into the ownership of property on which dives operate in the south side segregated district. Notice will be sent to all persons shown by the public records to be owners or agents and an investigation begun to ascertain the real identity of "dummy" names which appear of record.

As soon as the identity of the owners is determined warrants are to be issued for their arrest, unless there is an immediate termination of leases with divekeepers. It is not expected any court action will be started before the first of next week.

State's Attorney Wayman's raiding squad, headed by Detective "Steve" Barry, kept a close watch on the places at night, and Chief McWeeny's police patrol was on the job with orders to arrest any men who entered the dives.

Chief McWeeny instituted an investigation of reports that the dive-keepers were opening new places near the old district with the determination, it was said, of starting a new segregated vice district farther south. Several of these newly opened dives were said to be in Michigan avenue.

"There will be a lot of trouble for any one who tries to start any dives in Michigan avenue or other residence streets near the old district," the chief said. "The mayor's orders to keep such places out of the territory east of Wabash avenue and off streets with car lines are going to be enforced to the letter. I don't take any stock in the report that they will try to start up a new district, but we will have our eyes open."

COUNT IS SUED FOR $100 LOAN

Titled Gentleman is Made Defendant in Case at Chicago.

DIDN'T PAY WOMAN

Chicago, Oct. 10.—A suit for $100 was filed yesterday in the municipal court against Count Kalman I. Csaky, who resides at 2506 Lake View avenue. The plaintiff, Mrs. A. E. Weller, of New York city, said in her bill she loaned the money to Count Csaky in New York in 1909, when the count promised her he would repay the loan when he married.

The count did marry six months ago. His wife formerly was Mrs. Maude Inman, who just before her second wedding obtained a divorce and is said to have obtained a settlement of more than $100,000 from her husband, Bryan Inman, a Portland, Ore., lumberman, after a sensational trial in Portland. On account of the notoriety attaching to the count's marriage he was discharged by the Continental Trust and Savings bank, it is said. He had been working there since he first came to Chicago.

Loaned to Pay Hotel Bills.

The attorney for Mrs. Weller is Frank J. Snite, whose offices are in the Merchants Loan and Trust building. He said the money had been loaned to the count to pay pressing hotel bills.

"He said he would have plenty of money when he married," said Mr. Snite, "but he does not seem to have made good. I have several letters written by him to my clients which I shall offer in evidence.

"In every one of these letters he begs for money. He said that his future wife would be wealthy and that she would be willing to pay his debts.

"I think that is true to a certain extent, for he did repay my client's husband a little more than $4,000 he had borrowed while in this country."

Efforts to reach the count at night were fruitless. A maid who answered the telephone said she had strict instructions to give out no information concerning the count's whereabouts.

Later a woman who said she was the countess said all subjects relating to the count were private and hung up the receiver.

The Quickest, Simplest Cough Cure

Easily and Cheaply Made at Home. Saves You $2.

This recipe makes a pint of cough syrup—enough to last a family a long time. You couldn't buy as much or as good cough syrup for $2.50.

Simple as it is, it gives almost instant relief and usually stops the most obstinate cough in 24 hours. This is partly due to the fact that it is slightly laxative, stimulates the appetite and has an excellent tonic effect. It is pleasant to take—children like it. An excellent remedy, too, for whooping cough, croup, sore lungs, asthma, throat troubles, etc.

Mix one pint of granulated sugar with ½ pint of warm water, and stir for 2 minutes. Put 2½ ounces of Pinex (fifty cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. It keeps perfectly. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pine is one of the oldest and best known remedial agents for the throat membranes. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and all the other natural healing elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula.

The prompt results from this recipe have endeared it to thousands of housewives in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully.

A guaranty of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Voice at the White House.

Is this senatorial investigation of campaign contributions, past and present, but principally past, going to develop into melodramatic fiction with real throbs and thrills and dark mystery and plot and counterplot? It must be admitted that a promising mystery was injected into the record yesterday by the testimony of former Senator Nathan B. Scott, of West Virginia. Mr. Scott's mystery is The Voice at the White House. He heard it over the telephone back in 1904. It told him among other things, that Mr. Harriman was coming. The desperate situation of the republicans in the New York campaign was the subject under discussion over the wire between Mr. Scott and "The Voice." Some illuminating information as to Mr. Harriman's success as a money-raiser in campaigns has been given in earlier testimony before the committee. "The Voice" observed to Mr. Scott over the 'phone that "I would rather lose the election in the country than be defeated in my own state." Mr. Roosevelt was then president. He is from New York. Yet on the witness stand a few days ago the former president was explicit in the statement that he had never asked Mr. Harriman to raise money for the campaign. But that mysterious Voice at the White House! Whose could it have been? The report of Mr. Scott's testimony does not indicate that he cared to hazard a guess as to its ownership—and the whole country is just consumed with curiosity upon this point.

The action of the county commissioners in making an investigation into the fitness of the applicant, the real ownership of the place and the plane upon which business has been conducted before granting a renewal of liquor licenses, is to be cordially commended. It would be a splendid thing if it could be done in every case. The fit man who is obeying the law could not possibly suffer from an investigation, and the saloon man who is violating the law is thereby abrogating any claim to consideration that he may have had.

The newer generation that has gathered its impressions of political campaigns from those of the past dozen years or so will probbably be given an illuminating glimpse of an old-time political feature by the pole-raising scheduled for Spy Run avenue this evening. And yet it will scarcely be true to old-time form, for it is proposed to adorn the staff with electric lights. In the old days of campaign pole-raising there were no such things.

Governor Woodrow Wilson is scheduled to make an early morning call on Fort Wayne Friday, but despite the hour it is fully expected that the distinguished visitor will find plenty of Fort Wayne admirers out to bid him a cordial welcome.

Whitley county's proud claim to the oldest voter in Indiana in the person of one of her citizens at 96 years old; was sufficient to command real attention until it developed that an Indianapolis man of 103 has duly registered and is preparing to cast his ballot on November.

THE NEW BRYAN.

(New York World.)

It was no idle language of compliment that Gov. Wilson used at Lincoln, Neb., in his personal references to Mr. Bryan. The words were felicitous and they conveyed a truth which Americans very generally recognize.

That the democratic party is in this campaign unitedly in support of progressive principles and that its candidates are not at war with its principles are facts due in great measure to the influence of Mr. Bryan. Gov. Wilson's eloquent testimony to this effect was honorable alike to himself and his host.

There was a time when it seemed that Mr. Bryan was to be the wrecker of the democratic party, as Mr. Roosevelt has been of the republican party. He appeared to covet nominations more than true leadership; sensational radicalism more than harmony; rancor more than progress; personal triumphs more than party triumphs.

This year we find him as bold as ever in support of what he deems the right, but sobered and broadened, more tolerant, more willing to subordinate means to ends, and not at all disposed to resort to methods of needless proscription which make political cooperation on a grand scale an impossibility. If he is not a new Bryan he is a wiser and a better Bryan, and Gov. Wilson does well to direct attention to the fact.

The dignity of Mr. Bryan's position is all the more striking when contrasted with the ambition and pique revealed in that of Mr. Roosevelt. In the case of the former president, reputation, friends, party and country were sacrificed for self. It was easily within his power to force the nomination of a progressive at Chicago; but he could not do what Mr. Bryan did at Baltimore—stand aside for another.

Greed is the curse of this country. Most of our reforms are directed at some manifestation of it. The hope that some day it shall be curbed if not extirpated must rest not upon the gluttons of place and power but upon those who are able to forget themselves in public service.

OUR HORN OF PLENTY.

(Indianapolis Star.)

Now that the big job of getting the Indiana voters registered is out of the way and there is nothing more to do than to vote, it is worth while to take stock of the bountiful crops right here in Indiana. Pacific coast papers recently carried, under scare headlines, stories to the effect that crops in Indiana and several other middle western states were a failure. A glimpse of a revised report to the department of agriculture will show how true this is.

The average farm production for the season of 1912 in Indiana marks this year as one of the best in its history. The oats crop, which is often erratic, is the best in many years. The wheat crop was light, due to winter killing; but the fact was ascertained in time for farmers to reseed the ground to other crops, so the real loss was slight. The corn crop is now growing fast into maturity and will be harvested within the next few weeks. It will be one of the best the Hoosier state has ever grown. The quality is beyond the average, while the acreage is record-breaking.

Indiana is a great hay state and the crop this fall unusually good. Farmers thrashed a good quality of clover seed, also. Other small grains are reported excellent, with heavy yields. As to fruit, the Indiana apple still stands at the head of the list. Peaches were about 70 per cent of a crop, but there was plenty of other small fruit. However, the orchardist will make his profits on apples, which are even now at a strong price with an excellent demand. As for garden truck and vegetables, the yields were enormous. Tomatoes, "Irish" potatoes, sweet potatoes, sweet corn, melons and other produce were harvested in abundance. The average Hoosier's cellar is well stocked with good things to eat. Prices ought to be moderate and the people should profit by nature's lavishness.

AT THE G. O. P. CAMP MEETING.

A CHANCE FOR FAME.

(Toledo Blade.)

The secret of human flight has been solved. But the secret of human flight in safety is still locked up in the heart of nature.

Nearly two hundred birdmen and women have met with sudden death since that day when the world got a look at the Wright machine. A speed of more than one hundred miles an hour has been made by aeroplane. One man has driven his machine across the continent of America. Many and various other records have been made. Yet little has been gained in making aerial navigation much more safe a pursuit than smoking in a powder factory.

The birdman who would command the greatest distinction just now, the one alone who would deserve to have his name written beside the names of Orville and Wilbur Wright, is he who can take the deadliness out of flying.

INDIANA SISTER'S PLEA

May Secure a Pardon for Charles Sutton, Boy Bandit.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 10.—Moved by the appeal of his sisters, Mrs. Mamie Penniston and Mrs. M. E. Beauchamp, of Indianapolis, the Georgia prison commission today decided to ask Governor Brown to pardon "Charles Sutton," the boy bandit, who is serving four years in the Georgia penitentiary for a hold-up in Atlanta. Mrs. Penniston and Mrs. Beauchamp broke down as they told the life story of their "baby" brother. They could not hold back the tears.

Letters were presented from Governor Marshall, of Indiana, and other prominent men, attesting the boy's previous good character, and urging clemency.

The sisters said the boy ran away from home for love of a girl, and was the "victim of circumstances." Sutton is not the boy's real name. He has concealed that to save his family mortification.

CHICAGO HAS NEW POISON MYSTERY

Wealthy Waukegan Business Man is Rushed Dying to Hospital.

INVESTIGATION IS ON

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Fred Stafford, a wealthy business man of Waukegan, died at the Chicago Polyclinic hospital yesterday afternoon under circumstances which the authorities of the hospital are unable to explain completely. An inquest has been ordered held this afternoon to investigate the cause and circumstances.

The man was brought to Chicago yesterday from Bridgeport, Ill., in an unconscious condition by a man who gave his name to the hospital physicians as "Dr. Jones." He said Stafford was suffering from morphine poisoning. Then he departed.

Never Regains Consciousness.

Stafford never regained consciousness after he was taken to the hospital. All efforts to counteract the effects of the poisoning were in vain. The man died at 3:10 o'clock in the afternoon.

The hospital authorities said Stafford was taken there at 8:30 o'clock in the morning from the La Salle street station in the private ambulance of Edward Shute, 328 West Chicago avenue, an undertaker.

Mr. Shute said Stafford was unconscious when he arrived at the station and that he appeared to be sleeping on a bench in the station.

Stafford is said to have left Waukegan last Sunday, leaving a note for his sister-in-law, Mrs. J. J. Stafford, with whom he made his home, saying he had been called on a business errand to Vincennes, Ind.

Believes Brother Met Wife.

Mrs. J. J. Stafford is of the opinion that her brother-in-law went to Vincennes to meet his wife, from whom he had been estranged for more than a year. Mrs. Fred Stafford has made her home during this period in Bridgeport and Sumner, Ill.

can leaguers and tossed the ball about on the side lines.

Reports that several players of both teams would insist that the team members share, not only in the receipts of yesterday's tie contest, but in the next three games as well, as the game last Tuesday would make five games in all, were scouted by members of the national committee. Secretary John Heydler said that the players would share only in the first four games of the series, and that yesterday's contest, a tie, would count as one of the four games.

A rule to cover the question of tie games was drafted some time ago by the national commission.

Tris Speaker Lame.

When the Red Sox went out for field practice the home club "fans" groaned when they noticed that Tris Speaker, the Boston heavy hitter, limped perceptibly. Speaker wrenched his ankle sliding to first base in the third inning yesterday.

An automobile was presented to Tris Speaker for being the most valuable player to his team of any player of the American league.

It was announced that the batteries for New York would be Marquard and Myers and for Boston O'Brien and Carrigan. Devore was played in right field and Murray left field, the change being made as Murray plays a sun field. The batting order was:

The Batting Order.

Boston—Hooper, rf; Yerkes, 2b; Speaker, cf; Lewis, rf; Garnder, 3b; Stahl, 1b; Wagner, ss; Carrigan, c; O'Brien, p.

New York—Devore, rf; Doyle, 2b; Snodgrass, cf; Murray, lf; Merkle, 1b; Herzog, 3b; Meyers, c; Fletcher, ss; Marquard, p.

The crowd laughed when it was announced that if the ball hit any of the policemen stationed along the rear fences the ball would be considered still in play. Umpire Evans went behind the bat, Klem made the base decisions, Rigler went to right field and O'Loughlin went to left field.

Second Half—Carrigan sent up a high foul which Meyers smothered. O'Brien struck out, being unable to guage Marquard's fast curves. Hooper also struck out, and the crowd gave Marquard a cheer as he went to the Giants' bench. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNING.

First Half—Snodgrass went out, Yerkes to Stahl. The crowd gave Murray a great hand as he came to the plate. He was out, O'Brien to Stahl, on a bunt. Merkle was another victim by the O'Brien-Stahl combination, O'Brien fielding Merkle's puzzling grounder cleverly. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Half—Yerkes popped out to Fletcher. The crowd laughed as the Giant outfielders backed out to the fence as Speaker came to the plate. Speaker singled sharply to left. He ran with a limp to first base. The crowd kept cheering continuously to rattle Marquard. Speaker was forced at second, when Herzog took Lewis' grounder and threw to Doyle. Gardner flied out to Murray. No runs, one hit, no errors.

FIFTH INNING.

First Half—Herzog put a hit for two bases down the left field line. Meyers went out, O'Brien to Stahl, Herzog taking third. Herzog scored on Fletcher's single to right. Fletcher stole second, Carrigan's throw being a little low. Marquard walked as O'Brien became unsettled over the New Yorks hitting. Bedient began to warm up for Boston. Marquard was forced at second, when Wagner took Devore's bounder and tossed it to Yerkes. Fletcher took third on the play. Devore stole second. Fletcher was held at third. Doyle was purposely passed to first base and the bases were filled with two out. With three balls and two strikes called on Snodgrass, the crowd was in a ferment of excitement. Snodgrass flied to Lewis and the suspense was over for Boston. One run, two hits, no errors.

Second Half—Stahl singled to right field. It was a hard drive and well played by Devore, who held the batter on first base. Stahl was out attempting to steal on a short passed ball, Meyers to Doyle. Murray made a dazzling one-hand catch of Wagner's fly after first misjudging it. Carrigan went out, Marquard to Merkle. No runs, one hit, no errors.

SIXTH INNING.

First Half—The Boston fans applauded Murray for his catch as he went to the plate. Murray put up a high foul, which Lewis took after a hard run. Merkle was a strike out victim. Herzog, was out, Wagner to Stahl. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Second Half—Marquard bent three curves over the plate and O'Brien went back to the bench a victim of strikes. Doyle took Hooper's high fly after a hard run into right field. Yerkes put a single over second. Speaker put up a high foul which Meyers took. No runs, one hit, no errors.

SEVENTH INNING.

First Half—Meyers struck out. Fletcher was thrown out, Gardner to Stahl. Marquard's effective pitching was cheered by the crowd, who gave him a glad hand as he came to the plate. Marquard was out when Stahl took his grounder and tossed it to O'Brien. No runs, no hits, no errors. Everybody got up in the "lucky seventh" and cheered for several minutes.

Second Half—Lewis went out, Fletcher to Merkle. Murray toog Wagner's foul against the fence. Stahl got a two base hit into the bleachers. Had the ball gone ten feet higher it would have cleaned the high fence for a home run. Meyers saved Marquard a wild pitch by a fine catch behind the plate. Gardner sent up a high fly to Devore. No runs, one hit, no errors.

EIGHTH INNING.

First Half—Devore got a hit to left over Gardner's head. Doyle flied to Lewis. Snodgrass singled to left, Devore being held at second. Murray flied to Lewis. Snodgrass was forced at second when Wagner took Merkle's grounder and threw to Yerkes. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Second Half—Engle went to bat for Carrigan. It was announced also that Ball would bat for O'Brien. Engle flied to Murray. Ball struck out. Hooper took a base on balls. It was the first base on balls given by Marquard during the game. Herzog threw out Yerkes at first base. No runs, no hits, no errors.

NINTH INNING.

First Half—Bedient and Cady went in as the batteries for Boston. Herzog was hit by a pitched ball and took his first. Herzog was out, stealing second, Cady to Yerkes. Meyers singled past Wagner. Speaker made a brilliant running catch of Fletcher's long drive and then doubled up Meyers by a line throw to Stahl. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Second Half—Speaker popped up a fly to Fletcher. Lewis scratched an infield hit. Lewis scored on Gardner's double to right. Gardner was out when Marquard took Stahl's grounder and threw to Herzog, who touched the Boston runner before he could reach the bag. Hendricksen ran for Stahl. Hendricksen made third when Fletcher took Wagner's grounder and threw wildly to first. Wagner stole second. Devore caught Cady's long fly. One run, two hits, no errors.

CAR WILL STOP AT THE STATION

Governor Wilson May Speak Here Early Tomorrow Morning.

When Woodrow Wilson, democratic presidential nominee comes through Fort Wayne at 7 o'clock tomorrow morning, enroute to the east, his private car "Federal" will stand at the depot near Clinton street, while the train crew is changing engines. He will be in Fort Wayne for five minutes, and every effort will be made by local democratic leaders, to have the governor speak a few words to the crowds awaiting to see him.

Reports from Chicago this afternoon announce that Mr. Wilson is suffering slightly from the strenuousness of his trip and that he is hoarse. It may be that his condition will not permit him to speak, but officers of the Jefferson club, will go to Warsaw to meet the train, acting as a reception committee through Fort Wayne, and will try to induce Mr. Wilson to speak from the rear of his private car.

The Pennsylvania company will take every precaution against accident to the train carrying Governor Wilson. Captain H. C. Stoll and Lieutenant W. G. Bates went to Chicago at noon today and representatives of the trainmaster and the road foremen of engines will go to Chicago this evening to accompany the train over this division in the morning.

The private car "Federal," which is being used by the presidential nominee, will be the rear car on the train and will stand near Clinton street during the few minutes the train stops here.

BULGARIA IS HALTING.

War May Be Averted at Last Moment Says Premier.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 10.—The Bulgarian premier and minister of foreign affairs, I. E. Guechoff, declared this morning that he did not yet despair of war being averted at the last moment. The council of ministers held yesterday, he said, had not reached any decision, and the exchange of views between the Bulgarian government and the cabinets at Belgrade and Athens was continuing. As Montenegro had begun hostilities against Turkey she naturally has no more to say in the matter, he continued. In any case Bulgaria's decisions, he said, were not to be long delayed.

"REALLY DOES" PUT STOMACHS IN ORDER AT ONCE—PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN.

Time it! In just five minutes there will be no Indigestion, Sourness, Heartburn, Gas or Dyspepsia.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.—Adv.

HIS MEMORY VERY FAULTY

The letter referred to the "new senator from California," and set forth that while the Standard Oil company had no "direct relations" with him, Mr. Archbold would exercise such influence as was possible "through the Santa Fe."

Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the republican national committee, and John D. Archbold, president of the Standard Oil company, were the witnesses to be examined by the Clapp committee today. Chairman Hilles had been summoned to tell what he knew about the pre-convention campaign expenses of President Taft, whose secretary he was, and to explain published reports that he had accused the Roosevelt forces of having a campaign fund of $3,000,000 or more.

John D. Archbold was recalled by the committee to tell what papers he might have found bearing on the contribution of $100,000 he said the Standard Oil company made to the Roosevelt campaign fund in 1904.

Taft Expenses in Ohio.

L. C. Laylin, of Columbus, Ohio, assistant secretary of the interior, manager of the Taft primary in Ohio, the first witness to testify today, said he had filed a statement in Ohio showing total Taft expenses of $65,000 in the state primaries.

Charles P. Taft, Charles D. Hilles and Hulbert Taft, son of Charles P. Taft, were given by Mr. Laylin as contributors of most of the fund. The money came to him, he said, through Arthur I. Vorys.

A. H. Plant, controller of the Southern railway, said he knew of no contributions to the pre-convention campaigns this year and did not turn over any funds to Representative Underwood's managers before or during the Baltimore convention.

Senator Dix had testified it was common report that Mr. Plant had handled funds for the Underwood campaign.

Archbold Next Witness.

John D. Archbold followed Mr. Plant on the stand. Mr. Archbold had testified before the committee in August.

Chairman Clapp took up the explanation of the Standard Oil man as to the so-called Archbold letters, recently published. He first called attention to a letter to Senator J. B. Foraker, dated March 26, 1900, reading: "In accordance with our understanding I beg to enclose you certificate of deposit for $15,000 and ask for receipt in reply."

"I have no doubt I wrote the letter," said Mr. Archbold. "The payment was made for the services of Senator Foraker as counsel in our Ohio affairs; that, and that only."

Senator Clapp showed to the witness a reproduction of another letter written to Senator Foraker, dated April 17, 1900, referring to an enclosed certificate for $14,500. "I have no doubt I write it," said Mr. Archbold.

"What does that relate to?"

The Same; "Legal Duties."

"To the same business relationship," said Mr. Archbold.

Another letter of Nov. 26, 1900, enclosing a certificate of deposit of $10,000 "in pursuance of our understanding in our talk over the telephone," Mr. Archbold said was sent as a result of the same "legal duties" performed by Senator Foraker. A letter of Dec. 11, enclosing a certificate of deposit for $5,000, the witness said, was due to the "same relationship, that of counsel."

Senator Clapp produced a copy of a magazine showing what purported to be a photographic copy of a letter to the late Senator M. A. Hanna, dated Jan. 19, 1900.

"I have no recollection of it, but I've no doubt I wrote the letter," said Mr. Archbold.

Legislation at Columbus.

The letter referred to "threatened and very objectionable legislation at Columbus" concerning which Mr. Archbold said he had wanted to talk to Senator Hanna. It referred particularly to people active in supporting a resolution for an "investigating committee" and asked Senator Hanna to "do everything possible to compass their defeat."

Mr. Archbold asked to be allowed to explain the letter.

"That was the year of 'strike' legislation in various state legislatures," said Archbold, "and it was necessary for all corporate interests to appeal to their friends to prevent that sort of thing. It explains my letter to Senator Hanna."

Chairman Clapp then produced a copy of a letter from Archbold to former Representative C. H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, on Oct. 27, 1900, enclosing $1,000. "I think that was to aid in his campaign for re-election," said Mr. Archbold.

Of another "printed copy" of a letter purporting to have been written by M. A. Hanna, of which there was no photographic copy, Mr. Archbold said, he had no recollection.

Had No Recollection.

Mr. Archbold said he had "no objection" of a handwritten letter purporting to have been writen by Senator Hanna in which he said "I want you people to help our state committee liberally. The demands on me are simply awful."

"I have been unable to find such a letter," said Mr. Archbold.

Mr. Archbold could not recollect receiving another letter of which Senator Clapp showed him a photographic copy, written by Mr. Hanna, asking for assistance in the Ohio campaign and ending with the postscript:

"This whole fight is against the corporations and me as their champion."

The witness said he believed the handwriting was that of Senator Hanna.

Another purported Hanna letter was shown to Mr. Archbold, but he called attention to the fact that it was dated 1898. The senate committee had authority to ask only about letters written since 1900 and Chairman Clapp conceded the point.

Mr. Archbold said that he "had no doubt he wrote a letter of March 20, 1903, to Senator Hanna, saying that "We are amazed to learn that Smith W. Bennett is making a canvass for attorney general of Ohio," and asking that Senator Hanna do his best to prevent Bennett's election.

SPARROW PICKS UP A LIGHTED CIGARETTE.

Valparaiso, Ind., Oct. 10.—The discovery of fire in the belfry of the original building of Valparaiso university prevented a probable destruction of the structure, which is one of the land marks of the present 'varsity settlement. After the fire was extinguished an investigation to ascertain the cause was started and disclosed that a sparrow picked up a lighted cigarette from the street and flew with it to the belfry, where the cigarette ignited the straw of half a dozen nests.

Compliments Mrs. Robertson.

Mrs. Frances H. Robertson, state regent of the D. A. R., and Mrs. Matthew T. Scott, president general of the national organization, received many complimentary notices regarding their addresses made in Lafayette on Tuesday before the state convention. The Lafayette Courier says of Mrs. Robertson's address:

"Mrs. Robertson's address was a brilliant literary effort and was forcefully delivered. Mrs. Robertson is a particularly able speaker and the subject matter of her address was deeply interesting and instructive. She reviewed the work of the Daughters of the American Revolution and what it was doing to foster the spirit of patriotism in young people, preserve historical spots and relics and promote civic and ethical work in different communities. Mrs. Robertson referred to many notable events in the world's history and compared them with historical events in America. She compared the battles and the leaders in the revolution with the battles and leaders in foreign wars. Mrs. Robertson also spoke of the work being done by the various Indiana chapters."

Says: Don't Beautify in Public.

By Billie Burke.

THE FIRST WORD—"Talent is perfected in solitude," Goethe said, and so is a good complexion.

* * *

If you want to make a success of beautifying, persist in it until the results are satisfactory, but do not take your whole family into your confidence by telling them at once what you are going to accomplish. Small brother is likely to say, "Gee, but your neck is scrawny, and all that dope you rub on it isn't any good," and little sister, with equal candor, while entertaining your "best friend" who is awaiting the final touches of your toilet—which, alas, you may have delayed until the last moment—is quite liable to tell him just how you beautify. For small sister, no matter how young, always takes an eager interest in each detail and usually explains all about it at the least opportune moment.

Of course, every one acknowledges in this enlightened day that all things are fair in producing an excellent complexion, but always remember that brothers, friends and husbands enjoy the finished product, and not the process.

I know a man who discharged an employe because he detected her using a powder pad down behind the counter—"didn't approve of powder." The woman who is "just right" in his eyes has—well, to say the least—an artistically applied complexion and he willingly would take the most sacred oath that she never uses powder nor does a single thing to beautify. She is a fascinating widow, and, knowing his little weakness in this regard, never will offend his taste by applying powder to her nose in his presence. And they will live happy ever after.

I am not advising deceit; but creams, etc., are not things to be applied in public. When we by common sense methods have improved our personal appearances and all our family and friends are remarking, "How you have improved!" then is not the time to brag about what you have accomplished.

JUST ONE LAST WORD—We must beautify, but let's do it in secret.

FREE EXHIBITION OF PICTURES.

Many Watercolors Will Be Seen in Public Library for Two Weeks.

Under the auspices of the Indiana State Federation of Clubs, which is to hold its twelfth annual convention in this city on October 23, 24, 25 and 26, will be shown in the public library an exhibition of pictures known as the Philadelphia Watercolor Exhibit. The exhibition will open early next week, a number of days before the convention, in order that school children and citizens of the city may have ample opportunity to see it before the convention visitors arrive. The exhibition will be free and open to the public. Mrs. M. F. Johnston, of Richmond, who is widely known all over the state as a judge of pictures and who has had in charge for several years a traveling collection of oils, watercolors and engravings, which she varies every time, will arrive in the city tomorrow. Many of the pictures have already come and Mrs. Johnston, Miss Fanny Winch and others of the Art school committee, will see to their hanging, beginning at once on Mrs. Johnston's arrival.

This picture exhibit will be one of the big features of the state convention, the coming of which is interesting all the study club women of the city and the Twelfth district, especially. Word has been received by committees on registration and hotels of the intention of women from the southern part of the state to be present at the convention. Another big feature of the meeting, not a part of the program proper, will be a suffragette luncheon to be given at the Anthony hotel. The luncheon will be independent of the convention and expenses will be borne individually.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Rollicking Shannon.

John O'Donnell, the young Irish tenor, will be seen at the Majestic theater this evening. Friday and Saturday with a Saturday matinee, in the latest Celtic play, "Rollicking Shannon."

"Rollicking Shannon" deals with incident occurring in Old Erin something over a hundred years ago and gives Mr. O'Donnell ample scope to display his talents as a comedian, and to render several songs as only he can.

There is a pretty little love story interwoven which lends a bit of romance, and several stirring patriotic incidents, but a highly flavored comedy element predominates at all times, insuring almost incessant laughter.

An excellent cas assists Mr. O'Donnell in interpreting the play, which has been given a superb mounting.

The scenes represent the Killarney district and were painted from photos brought over by Mr. O'Donnell himself.

At Foster's $200 buys a housekeeping outfit that would cost $300 elsewhere. You don't believe it? Just look and see and you will.

HOMEY HINTS.

Use a Cork Knob.

Should the knob come off a pan or kettle, a screw can be slipped through the hole with the head inside the lid. Screw a cork onto the protruding end. This knob will not get hot and can be replaced.

Soda Peels Potatoes.

Many housewives do not know that it will be much easier to scrape potatoes if they are soaked for a while in water in which a little soda has been dissolved. Add a little milk to the water in which they are boiled and it will improve the flavor.

* * *

Coax Your New Gloves.

Before wearing new kid gloves, if they are laid between the folds of a damp cloth for an hour, they will be found much easier to put on. The damp causes the kid to become more pliable and to stretch to the shape of the hand without splitting or cracking. If rubbed with a piece of stale bread every time they are taken off, it will be necessary to send them to a cleaners much fewer times.

* * *

Saves the Roller.

If a piece of sheeting or blanket is sewn tightly round the worn roller of a wringing machine, it saves the clothes from being marked or torn.

* * *

Cooling Jellies.

To cool jellies stand the jelly mold in a bowl of water in which a handful of salt and the same of soda has been thrown.

* * *

To Keep Egg Yolks.

When eggs are not required for immediate use, put the yolks in a basin and barely cover with cold water. Place a plate on the basin to exclude the air. Stand in a dark cool place until required for use.

* * *

Skim the Fat.

After boiling a piece of ham or bacon, the liquor should be allowed to stand until cold and then skimmed for the fat. Press the water from the fat. It can be used for making pastry.

* * *

Balances Vase.

When using a light vase on the table fill the bottom of it with sand. This will prevent it from tipping over easily when filled with flowers.

VELVET EMBROIDERY.

Bouche and ribbed effects will be very generally employed both for day and evening wear. The sponge or Turkish toweling materials and embroideries are largely represented in stuffs that are absolutely new. Silk voile is going to be—as it always is—extraordinarily popular, and shot voile is a most fascinating fabric with a deep border of sponge cloth carried on to the stuff embroidered with dull silver and applique with velvet flowers.

It is hard to tell you just how fascinating these embroideries are; one has never seen anything quite like them before, and yet they have, with their raised flowers of velvet coming from trails of old silver, the prettiest look of antiquity that you can imagine. Velvet sprigs show on cloths of all sorts and are equally at home on satin, on fine chiffony voile or on serge, a truly delectable afternoon toilet being carried out in navy serge sprigged with mauve forget-me-nots and tiny green leaves.

BEADS AND SEQUINS.

The materials in which we may be beautiful at afternoon receptions this season are crepon de soie broche and silk sponge cloth, the latter being patterned with elaborate design, a yellow silk sponge, for instance, being flecked with black and showing a conventional design in blue and green leaves and flowers. Then there are the silk boucle cloths, which are certainly striking, the new moire broche and the golden tissues, which are very handsome and picturesque in the style.

Crepe de chine is also made up in the new broche patterns, and this is a delightful variation upon one of our favorite fabrics. Silk, it goes without saying, has not been left out in the new craze for brocade, and some of its all-over patterns are most exactly reminiscent of old-fashioned wall papers.

For the moment we are shown very few beaded effects, but such is the rage for brocade and moire that among the novelty silks there are a few with beads in a moire or broche pattern. At the same time sequinned gowns—cote de maille—will be looked upon as distinguished if anyone has the courage to wear them.

Mrs. Della Wiley is a Good, Smart, Wealthy Indian Woman, Best Shot, Best Rider, Best Cowgirl, Best Fisherman—But They Do Charge Her With Stealing Horses.

Wagoner, Okla., Oct. 10.—Of all "jail birds" that folks around here have seen, Della Wiley is the most unique and startling specimen. Della is a pretty Creek Indian girl, but she likes the Cherokees and whites better than her own tribe, and alternates her visits between the two former. She is one-fourth white.

Della is rich, owning nearly a square mile of fine farm land and a block in Wagoner. She is educated, jolly, as kind hearted as one can be, but she is fond of horses, and somehow, the sheriff says, after she has been along the horses are found over on the other side of the hills in the possession of Cherokee braves.

The last particular instance when Della separated a horse from a farmer near Wagoner happened last summer, the prosecutor explains. Della, arrayed in a very neat and modern hunting garb, "borrowed" the horse and was away towards the hills, he says.

The animal was traced to a Cherokee who said he bought it from Della Wiley. Della had, in the meantime, sallied forth on one of her regular hunting and fishing expeditions, and no white person has ever been able to track her when she once gets out in the hills.

Two months later she tired of hunting and on another horse did a rough-riding stunt through Wagoner's main street. She was arrested on a horse-stealing charge and placed in jail. Her first idea was to send for her pretty party dresses and some furnishings for the bare cell; also she had meals sent from the best hotel, instead of partaking of the jail rations. Then she held receptions for any admiring friends—and she has many—who might call at the jail.

"Oh, no, I'm not sorry," she told them. "Maybe I did ride a strange horse away that day. I can pay for it, I guess, And anyway, I don't mind being here, just so they let me out before the hunting season is over."

Besides being the best horsewoman in Northern Oklahoma, she is the best shot, the best fisherman, the best cow-roper, the best pony-breaker among women, and the peer of any man in any of those lines.

Her reputation as an alleged horse thief is the only thing against her. She admits that many of her Cherokee girl friends steal horses. The case looks bad for her, but she isn't begging for sympathy.

"If you publish anything about me," she said, "just say that Della is game!"

TASTE, SMELL AND HEARING RESTORED

A Simple, Harmless Remedy Quickly Relieves Catarrhal Deafness.

The thousands who suffer the miseries of colds and catarrh and claim they have never found a cure can get instant relief by simply anointing the nostrils with Ely's Cream Balm.

Unlike internal medicines which upset the stomach, or strong snuffs which only aggravate the trouble, this cleansing, healing, antiseptic Balm instantly reaches the seat of the trouble, stops the nasty discharge, clears the nose, head and throat, and brings back the sense of taste, smell and improves the hearing. More than this, it strengthens the weakened and diseased tissues, thus protecting you against a return of the trouble. This remedy will cure a cold in a day, and prevent its becoming chronic or resulting in catarrh.

Nasal catarrh is an inflammation of the membrane lining the air passages, and cannot be reached by mixtures taken into the stomach, nor can it be cured by snuffs and powders which only cause additional irritation. Don't waste time on them. Get a 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist, and after using it for a day you will wish you had tried it sooner.

Mothers should give the children Ely's Cream Balm for colds and croup. It is perfectly harmless, and pleasant to take.

TO HELP GROCER REDUCE EXPENSE

Tells This to Housewives as a Method of Cutting Cost of Living.

CARRY GOODS HOME

New York, Oct. 10.—"Through imagined lack of time and foolish conformity to custom the women of the middle class are adding to the high cost of living," says Mrs. Ansel Oppenheim, who has made a study of the matter. She recommends housewives to rid themselves of false pride and not be ashamed to carry home their own purchases.

"In New York city," she said, "the delivery of goods seems to have become an obsession with the women of all classes. They expect everything, even down to a bunch of carrots, to be delivered by the dealer. That means horses, wagons and one or two boys or men. These cost money, and necessarily it comes from the customers. It has been asserted that the dealer would charge just as much for his goods if he didn't have to deliver them. This is not a fact. In at least one uptown bakery and grocery are signs over the counter informing the customer that if she pays cash and carries her bread home herself she will get the loaf for nine cents, or three for a quarter. They tell you plainly on the sign that delivery costs money and that if you pay cash they can afford to make the price lower because a bookkeeper will be unnecessary. On the item of bread alone a family using a loaf a day will save $3.65 a year. If a proportionate reduction were made on other items the saving would be very much more.

"In a small town in New Jersey a butcher opened a shop with no credit, no delivery, cheaper meat and good meat as his motto. At first the people rebelled; they had always been used to having their goods delivered and runing a monthly account. But soon they began to see the advantage of the new plan, and now the butcher is doing a flourishing business without one bad debt, and without the necessity of making his customers pay the salaries of two delivery boys and a bookkeeper. He is selling meat from one to ten cents a pound less than any other shop in town.

"The flathouse, where apartments rent for $30 to $50 a month, with elevators and hall service, palms and imitation marble, is a great discourager of bundle-carrying. The woman is ashamed to be seen carrying a package from her grocer's. It is false pride, nothing else, and the first thing to be overcome.

"This is a city of clubs. Why do not women who are really interested in the welfare of their families form a non-delivery club? Few flat dwellers live far from a grocer or a butcher, and to carry home their own supplies would not be a great tax on their strength. Let the grocer of your neighborhood dispense with all unnecessary help in this way and get cash for his goods and see if he won't give his customers the benefit of it.

"Someone has said that the millionaire and the pauper are the only two classes that can live in a great city; that these two get the best of things and force the middleman out to the country or absorb him. The example of the wealthy class which the poor moth of a middle class man tries to follow swamps him. When the pauper is ill he is attended by the best physicians in the hospitals; when he is hungry he is fed. The iddle class man takes the mediocre physician because he is too proud to accept charity, and frequently goes hungry in order to maintain an outward appearance of prosperity. Such men must either get back to the soil and abandon the city or overcome their false pride. I believe there is not a neighborhood of flat dwellers in New York city where a large body of women could not bring about a club shopping arrangement and so reduce the cost of living."

GOING TO STATE MEETING.

OLD SWEETHEART GETS HIS MONEY

After Twenty Years Remembered Virginia Woman He Courted.

BENEFITS IN WILL

Albany, Ore., Oct. 10.—As the result of a love affair of almost a quarter of a century ago, revived in recent years through correspondence, Mrs. Louisa Yancey, of Wilmington, Va., will receive $1,000. F. M. Gatts, of Lebanon, who was Mrs. Yancy's admirer, died last week, and his will, which was admitted to probate, bequeaths the woman he had no seen for more than twenty years $1,000 out of an estate valued at $2,200.

The remainder of Gatts' estate is bequeathed to his only living heir, George H. Gatts, his son, who resides in Lebanon.

Gatts was married twice and narrowly missed a third matrimonial venture in an experience with a marriage bureau, but the romance with the Virginia widow appears to have been his guiding thought when he made his will.

Gatts met Mrs. Yancey when he was living in Virginia more than twenty years ago. He was then living with his first wife and Mrs. Yancy was also married.

Gatts and his wife later moved to Oregon and located at Lebanon, where Mrs. Gatts died several years ago.

Christmas day, 1902, Gatts married Sophronia E. Parks, of Lebanon. They lived together about five years and were divorced.

After this divorce Gatts learned that Mrs. Yancy's husband was dead, and a correspondence soon sprung up between them.

Gatts wanted to marry Mrs. Yancy, but friends persuaded him not to do so for the reason that in recent years the man, who was sixty-nine years old when he died, was in poor health. It is said that his death was largely due to disappointment because the people of Lebanon refused to take seriously a lecture which he had arranged to give.

Mrs. T. A. Town, 107 6th St., Watertown, S. D., writes: "My four children are subject to hard colds and I always use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound with splendid results. Some time ago I had a sever attack of la grippe and the doctor prescribed Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and it soon overcame the la grippe. I can always depend upon Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and am sure of good results." For all coughs and colds in children and grown persons, and for chronic coughs of elderly people. BATHERS GET CREOSOTE DIP.

Mobile Girls Coated With Steamer's Cargo Spilled in Bay.

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 10.—Many young women of Mobile society, as well as other persons of both sexes and in varying walks of life, were unintentional blackface comedians recently.

The trouble happened in the water of Mobile bay when numerous bathing parties went in for an evening dip. A big lighter, laden with creosote and beached during the recent storm, had capsized and emptied its black contents into the water.

At Monroe park, and elsewhere, however, there was not light enough to see the floating scum, and it was not until the first bathers began emerging that they found themselves coated with a tarry substance that would not wash off.

Many walked home rather than face the street car crowds.

Mr. Jas. V. Churchill, 90 Wall St., Auburn, N. Y., has been bothered with serious kidney and bladder trouble ever since he left the army, and says: "I decided to try Foley Kidney Pills as they had cured so many people and I soon found they were just the thing. My kidneys and bladder are again in a healthy condition. I gladly recommend them." Many an old soldier has never recovered from the effects of army life. Foley Kidney Pills are tonic in action, quick in results. The genuine in a yellow package. Dreier Drug Co.—Adv.

SPECIAL SERIES OF POST STAMPS

Novel Design for New Parcels Post Mailing System.

PICTURE OF WORKER

Washington, Oct. 10.—Arrangements have been made by Postmaster General Hitchcock for the engraving and manufacturing of a series of twelve stamps, unique in size and novel in design, for exclusive use in the forwarding of packages by the parcels post. Under the law recently enacted by congress ordinary stamps can not be used for this purpose.

The special parcels post stamps will be larger than the ordinary stamps and will be so distinctive in color and design as to avert any possible confusion with stamps now in use.

The new issue will be in three series or designs. The first will illustrate modern methods of transporting mail, one stamp showing the mail car on a railway train; a third a motor car now used in the postal service, and a fourth, the dispatch of mail by aeroplane.

The second series will show the four great classes of postal employees—post-office clerks, railway mail clerks, city letter carriers and rural delivery carriers—at work in their several environments.

The third series will represent four industrial scenes showing the principal sources of the products that probably will be transported extensively by parcels post.

The stamps will be ready for distribution December 1 in order that the sixty thousand postoffices may be supplied with them before the law becomes effective January 1.

SUNSHINE AFTER HEAVY DOWNPOUR

Weather of Early Morning Promises Third Game Will Be Staged.

PLAYERS ARE WEARY

Boston, Mass., Oct. 10.—Following a night of rain, which extended into the early morning hours, the Giants and Red Sox were prepared today to play off the second game of their series for the world's baseball championship. Yesterday's nip and tuck struggle through eleven innings, which was ended on a tie at 6 to 6 as darkness fell, brought the contest again to Fenway park.

Prospects for playing today's game were dubious. An hour or two after sunrise the sun shone brightly on the rain-drenched grounds at Fenway Park, drying up the moisture to the satisfaction of Groundkeeper Jerome Kelly, who had earlier begun an attempt to obtain the same result by artificial means.

It had rained intermittently during the night and the grounds were soggy in spots. The rain failed to dampen the spirits of a small number of fans who, sheltered by boxes, boards and newspapers, kept their places at the bleacher gates throughout the night, despite the occasional downpour. One man who saw yesterday's game, said he had been away from the grounds in thirty-six hours only long enough to get shaved. He appeared to be in fairly good circumstances, and said he came from out of town.

Showers Promised.

The official forecaster predicted occasional showers during the day, but said unofficially that he thought they would not be heavy enough to make the field unfit for playing. Either because of the rain, or because the novelty of world's series baseball had worn off, the crowd today was smaller and gathered more slowly than that of yesterday.

There was much uncertainty of the reserved tickets for today. The Boston club had sold single tickets for three games, numbered one, two and three. Yesterday check No. 1 was punched. Today was called game No. 2 and it was announced that the next game in Boston would be game No. 3. Regarding the tickets sold in New York for the second game in that city which was to have been played today it was said at the local offices that these tickets would be good tomorrow.

Managers McGraw and Stahl, in common with nearly all the players, were ready to greet the announcement of a postponement with satisfaction. Darkness ended yesterday an exhausting struggle and one particularly hard on the pitchers. New York has two pitchers who need to rest. Tesreau, who was knocked out of the box in the opening game of the series in New York last Tuesday, and the one-time redoubtable Mathewson, who finished yesterday's game under a severe physical strain. "Matty" said: "It was the hardest game I ever went through. I certainly felt 'all in' when it was all over."

Blow to the Giants.

Mathewson's failure to win—this manner of phrasing the result was most frequently voiced by the Boston players—was a blow to McGraw's plans.

"I did expect Matty to win for us," he said. "I haven't used him for nearly a month, and I was sure he could come through. But he did not lose, we did not lose and the moral victory belongs to us. The boys made a grand fight against a big, early lead. The same spirit will yet carry them through the series to the big title."

Manager Stahl also had a pitching problem to solve. With one game tucked away, that won with Joe Wood pitching at New York Tuesday, Boston has used up four pitchers in two days. Collins, Hall and Bedient figuring successively in the Boston box yesterday.

Marquard was regarded as the best available pitcher for New York by baseball sharps, who were of the same opinion regarding "Buck" O'Brien, of the Red Sox twirlers. These were the probable pitching selections for today's game.

Each of these two men had been primed to pitch in the third game of the series, but it had been expected that the game would be played in New York and it was McGraw's object to bring Marquard into the box before a home crowd. The Giant southpaw needs sympathetic surroundings to be at his best, and some followers of the game thought today McGraw would still hold Marquard for the next game in New York and send either Crandall or Wiltse to the box. The former finished the first game in good style, after Tesreau had been removed, and is a good hitter besides.

The two world's series games this year have set new total records. Although the attendance at the first game in New York this year fell 3,000 short of the figures for last year's opening game in the same city, the total for the two games of the present series is 1,311 greater than for last year's first two contests. Last year 64,387 persons saw the first two games; this year 65,578 have paid to see the corresponding contests. The difference is made up entirely from the greatly increased number of persons who saw yesterday's game in this city.

LOOKS LIKE THE PICK WAS RIGHT

Hughey Jennisgs Predicted "Red" Murray Would Hit in Series.

HAS BEEN DOING IT

Taking up the 1911 record of "Red" Murray, of the Giant outfield, experts were inclined to accept with many misgivings the prediction by Hughey Jennings that he would be the hero of the title tilt of 1912, and scoffers laughed at the forecast, but the former Notre Dame student has batted brilliantly in the two games played and he still has ample opportunity to prove himself a hero as at least three more battles will be fought.

His batting record for the second game was one triple, one double and a single in five times up and each one of the hits was a big factor in the game. Murray didn't hit last year but he has been a tower of strength to the New York club in the two games played this season.

Before the world's series of 1911 the players participating in fall series under the direction of the national commission, were permitted to share in the gate receipts of the first four games, besides the receipts of any tie game that might be played before four games were completed.

Last fall the New York and Philadelphia players, especially the former, demanded that they be counted in on the money received for the moving picture privilege as well as the gate money for four games. This looked so greedy to the members of the commission that they passed a rule declaring that a tie game in a series before four had been played should count as one of the four, and the players should not be allowed to share in four others besides that one.

Yesterday the Cubs and Sox played a tie game and Boston and New York quit on even terms. It counts as no game and must be played over, but it counts as one of the four in which the players share in the money.

In the fall of 1907 the Cubs and Detroit played a tie game in Chicago at the start of the world's series and were permitted to share in the gate money of that game as well as the next four.

Tie games at Boston in the world's series and at Chicago in the city series will increase the receipts of the respective club owners and the national commission by approximately $70,000.

With three games won in the post-season series with Minneapolis, champion of the American association, to its credit, the Denver team, champion of the Western league, backed by the Denver chamber of commerce, will enter a challenge to the winners of the world's championship if the Denver team wins the game today. President Edward K. Yetter, of the chamber of commerce, said that negotiations will be begun as soon as the winning game is secured.

RAIN AT CHICAGO.

Second City Championship Game Is Declared Off.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—The second game of the series for the city championship between the two Chicago clubs of the National and American leagues which was scheduled for this afternoon at Comiskey park as a result of yesterday's ties, was declared off today on account of rain.

Darkness ended the scoreless game between the Cubs and the White Sox yesterday after nine innings of play.

SHAMROCKS AT MONROEVILLE.

Monroeville, Ind., Oct. 10.—Sunday will see the close of the baseball season here when the local team will meet the Fort Wayne Shamrocks. The management of the home team is making no brags but hopes to give the crack visiting team a hard battle. As extra expense has been incurred in getting this team here, the fans should turn out and give them support. The line-up for this game will be practically the same as has played here all season and is composed of nearly all home players. With possibly one change, the locals will line up as follows: Left field, Krick, center field, Steinman; right field, Bauserman; first base, Richards; second base, Peckham; shortstop, Savio; third base, Reynolds; catcher; Lauterberg; pitcher, Reullie.

THREE-I COUNTS ON TERRE HAUTE

Expects That It Will Be Taken Into Circuit Next Season.

WOULD NOT OBJECT

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 10.—Action looking toward the annexation of the Terre Haute territory by the Three-I league is popular here as this city has had but one successful season in the Central and it is believed a change will be beneficial.

Success in the Three-I last season was general and at the annual meeting the salary limit was increased from $1,900 to $2,300, which is the same as the Central established last spring.

That there will be some territorial changes is certain, and that Terre Haute is looked upon as one of the cities that will be given up is almost as certain.

The illness of Owner Claude H. Varnell has delayed action in the Central league. He has written friends here that he expected to sit up for a while today for the first time after his operation, and in a few weeks he will probably be able to attend a meeting here.

O'DAY IN DISCARD.

Garry Herrmann Says He Will Not Manage Reds in 1913.

New York, Oct. 10.—Hank O'Day will not manage the Cincinnati Reds next year. This statement was made Monday night by President August Herrmann, of the Cincinnati baseball club. Frank Chance, deposed leader of the Chicago Cubs, will also not handle the Cincinnati team, according to the information coming from the same authority. The Red chief does not criticize O'Day, but he believes that better results can be obtained by placing the team in the hands of a younger man.

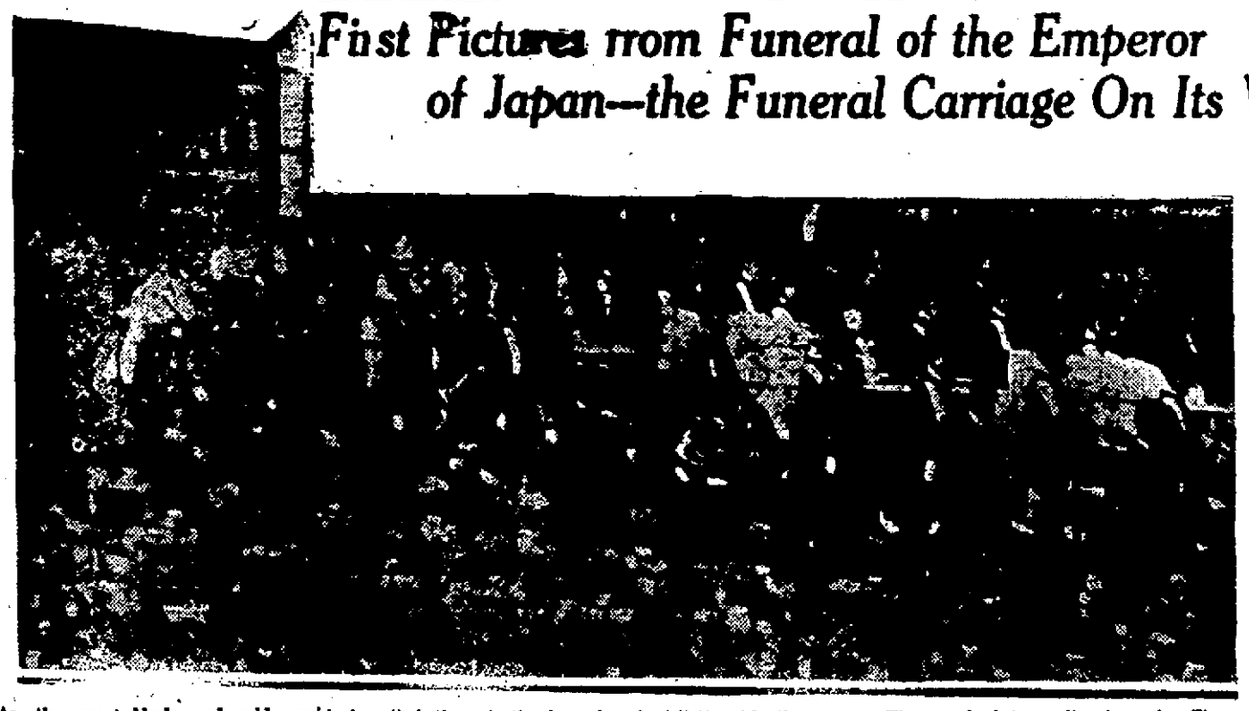
First Pictures from Funeral of the Emperor of Japan—the Funeral Carriage On Its Way



As the great black and gold car rolled into view behind the five steady oxen, complete silence fell among the waiting throng. One was able to see hands steal to the breasts of hundreds about him in an attitude of prayer, and from all directions came stifleld sobs which more than convinced one that it was not a throng of curious alone who had waited through the long day for this moment, but an army of loyal subjects come to pay their last respects to a ruler they loved and honored above all things else.

The five sacred oxen were closely surrounded by naval and military officers resplendent in gold lace and feathers, so close indeed, that one could hardly distinguish the oxen. The cavalcade moved slowly. Then came a stool for the shafts of the car to rest upon, together with the steps, poles, rain covers, many official dignitaries, torches, then Prince Fushimi in old-time ceremonial dress, aides de camp to the Princes of the Blood, funeral commissioners, torch bearers and priests, and then officials according to rank. There seemed to be a never-ending stream of gold lace and plumed cocked hats, followed by thousands of frock-coated and silk-hatted gentlemen, and then commenced several regiments of khaki-clad soldiers headed by another military band playing Meyerbeer's funeral march.

The procession lasted from 7:45 to 9:30 p. m.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 8.—Into Tony's place, at 402 Main street, came the man with a permanent thirst. He sidled up to the bar and in a husky whisper announced to Jerry, the red-headed bartender:

"Say, Bo, I got to have a drink and there's no use discussin' any compromise. I'd rather drink than eat an' my stomach craves food. Jus' to show you I'm all right even if I hain't got no money and I'm sincere, an' all that, here's my false teeth fer one bowl of suds man's size an' shy the collar. Do cash 'em in?"

"You do," replied the bartender, and took the man's upper and lower masticators without so much as a "bat of the eye."

"I'll be back and redeem 'em tonight," assured the jag.

"If you don't I'll fit another man to 'em," warned Jerry, as he wrapped the molars in a piece of moist tissue paper and rang them up in the cash register as "5 cents."

DRESSES CHICKS IN REAL CLOTHES

Farmer's Wife Does Tailoring for 66 Plymouth Rock Chicken.

HAVE NO FEATHERS

Philadelphia, Oct. 10—Mrs. Ellen Buck, a farmer's wife of Bristol, spent considerable time here recently inspecting poultry exhibits to ascertain if any one had any improvements on her methods of clothing featherless chickens.

Mrs. Buck has had to care for sixty-six Plymouth Rocks that were entirely devoid of feathers. Try as she would, nothing would make the feathers grow, and from far and near came sightseers to look at the odd-appearing chicks. Now that cold weather is coming, Mrs. Buck has conceived the idea of clothing her naked pullets and roosters in little suits made up of old stockings. Using sections of the stockings as garments, she snipped small holes for legs and wings.

The trim elastic cloth fitted the chicks well, and her ingenuity became the topic of the countryside. When the news of her invention became known Mrs. Buck became at once the object of much advice. The rural free delivery mail carrier delivered more than 300 letters on the subject.

Some criticised her and said that chickens were creatures of habit and that now she had begun the task of tailoring for her pullets, she would have to keep it up anad make new suits of clothes two or three times every year. Others said that with clothes on them the chickens would never grow feathers, and again some thanked her for the idea, claiming that she had solved the greatest problem with which poultry fanciers have to contend.

One indignant correspondent was deeply shocked, claiming that if these featherless fowls are mated they will produce a breed that will affront common decency unless they arec lothed. It is suggested that they be prevented from mating and that the roosters be clothed in little cutaway coats and the hens in little dresses.

The Boys' and Girls' Farm Camp of Iowa, an outgrowth of the Chautauqua movement, is designed to give an inexpensive summer outing to its members and at the same time a training in the practical, comonplace things of every day life. The camp's management is largely under the control of the boys and girls themselves, with the initiative and referendum as part of the political mechanism.

IS BIG HEIR BUT IS LEGALLY DEAD

Accidental Reunion Reveals a Twenty Year Romance.

RUN AWAY AS A BOY

Providence, R. I., Oct 10—The story of a runaway who has been declared legally dead, thereby losing a bequest of $400,000, was told when John C. Beck, a bookkeeper at the Tremont house, disclosed his identity.

Twenty years ago, when a youth of nineteen, Beck ran away from his father's house in Edinburgh and came to the United States. He toured the country with a theatrical troupe and later obtained employment at the Tremont house.

Beck says his true name is Begg. A few days ago, in glancing over a Boston newspaper, he saw the name of F. F. Begg, as a delegate from England to the Congress of Chambers of Commerce. Beck went to Boston and discovered that F. F. Begg was his brother, a member of the London stock exchange and the London chamber of commerce. Beck then learned of his father's death, and the distribution among his brothers and sisters of the $400,000 which had been left to him.

Beck says another brother, William, is now a member of parliament in Australia, and a third, Charles, is a physician at Bath, England. He has a sister, unmarried, in London.

Mrs. Paul Wehling, 316 Smith St., Peoria, Ill., had kidney and bladder trouble, with terrible backache and pain across the hips. Just imagine her condition. She further says: I was also very nervous, had headaches and dizzy spells, and was fast getting worse when I took Foley Kidney Pills, and now all my troubles are cured. Foley Kidney Pills have done so much for me I shall always recommend them." Foley Kidney Pills are rich in curative qualities and contain no habit forming drugs. Try them. Dreier Drug Co.—Adv.

S. E. COTTER INSPECTS WORK

General Superintendent of Wabash Takes Look at Improvements.

PENNSY FREIGHT AGENTS MEET HERE

Called by Division Agent E. T. Wood to Talk Over Matters.

S. E. Cotter, general superintendent of the Wabash, spent the night and forenoon in the city conferring with local agents, track elevation contractors, city officials and others concerning matters connected with the improvements now under way by the Wabash. Supt. J. C. Sullivan accompanied Mr. Cotter over the grounds and went with him to Toledo on the train which left at 11:50 o'clock.

FREIGHT AGENTS MEET.

Big Gathering of Hustlers at Hotel Anthony.

E. T. Wood, division freight agent of the Pennsylvania, is presiding this afternoon over a meeting of the company's freight agents at the Hotel Anthony. All of the agents at the towns where roads cross the Pennsylvania, known as "joint agents," are present and many from the other stations on the Western division. The meeting is being held in the assembly hall.

WITH WABASH 40 YEARS.

S. C. Reynolds, who was retired from the board of directors of the Wabash at the annual meeting at Toledo Tuesday, at his own volition, had held that office forty years. John T. Terry also retired from the board and as Edwin Hawley, another member, died some months ago, there were three vacancies to fill. J. Horace Harding, Henry E. Cooper and H. Rogers were elected to fill the vacancies. In addition to these gentlemen, the board of directors includes the following: Winslow S. Pierce, George J. Gould, Edward T. Jeffrey, Robert Gouelet, Alvin W. Krech, Thomas H. Hubbard, J. J. Slocum, Robert M. Galloway, all of New York; Edward B. Pryor, St. Louis, and Frederick A. Delano, of Chicago. The directors will meet in New York next Tuesday for organization and President Frederick A. Delano will be re-elected.

M. & O. CLUB OUTING.

The M. & O. club, whose thirty or forty members are employes of the Wabash, with the exception of two men, will hold its fall outing at the Moocher clubhouse, near Robison park, next Sunday and preparations for the event are already in progress. The club members will go to the scene of the outing in automobiles and auto trucks and this will be one of the enjoyable features of the day. Other features will be fishing and casting contests, baseball game, quoits game and a big feast. Nicholas Gilb is the president and Charles Horstmeyer the secretary of the club.

TO SPEND WINTER IN WEST.

T. J. Rodabaugh, the retired foreman of the Pennsylvania paint department, accompanied by Mrs. Rodabaugh, will leave this evening over the Pennsylvania for Colorado Springs. After a stay of two or three weeks there, they will go to California to spend the winter. Mr. Rodabaugh was in the employ of the Pennsylvania nearly fifty years, but for the past six or eight years, has been on the retired list, having passed the seventy year mark.

SAFETY COMMITTEE MEETING.

Supt. J. C. Sullivan, chairman of the division safety committee of the Wabash, has issued instructions to hold the monthly meeting, which otherwise would have fallen upon next Thursday, on Tuesday. This change is made in order that ample time may be given to make a complete report of the proceedings to be presented to the meeting of the general safety committee at St. Louis on the following Monday.

SIX CARS DERAILED.

Six cars of westbound Wabash train No. 73 left their own rails and started down the Pennsylvania tracks at the junction at Hanna street at 8:30 o'clock this morning. Each car was derailed, but none was upset, and the damage was not very great.

IS A BRAKEMAN NOW.

Clarence Lapp, at his own request, has been transferred from fireman to brakeman on the Pennsylvania road. The transfer was made last week. The young man is a son of Machinist Henry Lapp, of the Pennsylvania shops.

END OF FINGER CLIPPED OFF.

Earl Chenoweth had the end of the index finger of his left hand clipped off at 8 o'clock this morning while operating the big power shears in the punch department of the Fort Wayne Electric works. He was attended by Dr. F. J. Schulz, the company's surgeon.

INDUSTRIAL NOTES.

J. A. Ebert and H. A. Meinel, Pennsylvania shopmen, are sick and off duty.

John C. Werkman, president of the Barbers' union, is confined to his home by an attack of acute indigestion.

Charles Bradley, who had been at the lakes a week, reported for work at the Pennsylvania erecting shop this morning.

Henry Stemmler, a clerk in the Pennsylvania shops, has recovered from an illness which kept him from work a week.

Herbert Meisner, who sustained painful injuries in the Pennsylvania freight house three weeks ago, has resumed his duties.

E. W. Hayes, the Galena oil man, was in the city today calling upon the railway officials and other patrons of th coil company.

Andy Havilin reported for work at the Pennsylvania shops this morning after an absence of two or three days on account of the sickness of his wife.

John B. Fowler, chief clerk in the Pennsylvania store room, is laying off today to move his family from Wall street to Green street, near Thomas.

P. P. Neuman, who had an eye hurt some days ago, resumed work in the Pennsylvania erecting shop this morning, the optic having recovered from the injury.

Old Fort council, Royal League, had a big meeting last evening and added several names to the membership roll. There are many railroad and shop employes in this order.

C. W. Koenig has returned from Toledo, where he represented President James F. Kline, of Chicago, president of the Blacksmiths' International union, in some business transactions.

The Bass company employes were paved this morning. The amount of the distribution of cash was slightly above former pay days, because the company has taken on a number of new employes.

The C., B. C. company is assembling the building material at Markle for a new depot. The people of that little burg were disturbed by the delay of the company, fearing that they would never get a station.

W. R. Brown has been appointed road foreman of engines of the C., H. & D., with headquarters at Indianapolis, and A. A. Iams gets a similar office at Dayton, Ohio. These are said to be newly created offices on the C., H. & D.

Ray Cary and a box of cigars for the boys appeared at the Wabash machine shop this morning. The young man had been off duty holding receptions in honor of his son, who put in an appearance last Monday, as mentioned by The Sentinel yesterday.

John Browsky, 76, crossing tender of the West 110th street crossing of the Nickel Plate in Cleveland, was so intent on keeping school children from passing in front of an approaching freight Monday that he did not hear a switch engine behind him. He was struck and died an hour later.

George Auer, the Wabash shopman who had a hand badly hurt by getting it caught in the crane chain at one of the forges in the shop, as mentioned in The Sentinel yesterday, has gone to the Peru hospital for treatment. Dr. C. F. Kaadt, the company surgeon at this point, amputated one of the injured fingers yesterday.

PALE PINK EGGS FROM DUCKS.

Diet Tests in Paris Disclose Several Remarkable Results.

Paris, Oct. 8.—The French Academy of Science has been devoting its attention of late to ascertain how to obtain the biggest eggs from poultry.

A naturalist named Magnan has tried various experiments in feeding and giving different broods of ducks flesh, fish and vegetable diet. He has found that those fed on fish laid first, those on meat eight days later and the vegetarians two and a half months later, at the age of ten months.

Between Dec. 17 and May 14 the fish-eating ducks laid fifty-four eggs, the flesh-eating forty-five and the vegetarians nineteen. The eggs of the flesh-eating ducks were the heaviest, those of the vegetarians came next and the fish-eaters' eggs were the lightest.

A curious detail was that the fish-eating ducks laid green eggs, the flesh-eating white and the vegetarians pale pink.

MAN OF PEACE, SAYS COLONEL

But When Anybody Attacks Him, He Declares He'll Fight.

WILL TAKE NEW TACK

Superior, Wis., Oct. 10.—"I probably should not have made the reference to Mr. Wilson that I have made," said Col. Roosevelt here today, "if he hadn't attacked me. But when anybody attacks me he might as well understand that I won't take it lying down. I'm a man of peaceful disposition, but I think I am able to defend myself."

Col. Roosevelt stopped for an hour in Superior this morning on his way to Minnesota. His managers had planned a comparatively easy day for him, after two days of rapid-fire speech-making in Michigan. He was to spend most of the day in Duluth and no speeches elsewhere were scheduled before the one at Superior.

Having given more than a month to the exposition of the principles of the new party, which he believes are now well understood, he plans to take a new line of attack during the closing weeks of the campaign and "unlimber the big guns." His speech in Houghton, in which he criticised Gov. Wilson for the "sullen hostility" toward labor which he said Mr. Wilson had displayed in the past, was the first of the series which he expected to make.

Colloquy With Man in Crowd.

Uproar among the auditors followed a colloquy between Col. Roosevelt and one of his listeners at Houghton last night. The colonel was replying to Gov. Wilson's charge that the steel trust was behind him and incidentally made reference to the congressman from this district.

A man in an automobile in front of the colonel stood up and using his hands as a megaphone, shouted:

"That is not true."

"I suppose, sir," Col. Roosevelt called back, "that you approve of the theft at Chicago. You stand for theft and you stand for lying and false witness."

"That is not so," the man shouted.

The crowd was thrown into such an uproar by the incident that it was some time before Col. Roosevelt could make himself heard.

"I don't know who you are," he called out, "but I am told you represent the coal trust. It is perfectly natural that you should object to hearing the truth about your side of the campaign."

Attacks Wilson on Labor.

On the ground that Woodrow Wilson "displayed sullen hostility to labor" in the past, Col. Roosevelt appealed in his speech for the support of workingmen for the progressive party.

"In this campaign," he said, "our opponents rely for the most part on misrepresentation. It is natural that those men who have violated the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal,' in preventing the people from nominating whom they wished, although should violate the commandment, 'Thou shalt not bear false witness.'

"A couple days ago, Mr. Wilson stated that the steel trust was behind me. I answered that it was not, and challenged him to name any individual interest in steel, except Mr. Perkins, who was with me. Mr. Wilson comes out today and says that all he meant was that the steel trust was behind me in thought. Evidently Mr. Wilson is a 'mind reader.'"

Col. Roosevelt denounced "crooked big men" and said that no "side show trust heads" should have more than one vote. As he finished his speech he waved his hat at the man in the automobile.

"I knew I'd have a good time here in Marquette," he said, "but I did not know how much I was going to enjoy it. Thank you."

Court Action Deferred in Suit to Stop Race Gambling.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 10.—Action on the petition of Attorney General Honan for a restraining order to prevent gambling and racing at a new track at Porter, Ind., near the Illinois state line, will not be taken until after next Saturday, the time set for the opening races. The attorney general received word last night from Judge McMahon that he will be unable to grant a hearing in the case before next week. The attorney general's office will have a representative at the track to watch for evidence.

In the petition filed yesterday it is alleged that the racing foundation corporation has made no application for an Indiana charter and therefore has no right to hold races in this state. It also is alleged that the track has been constructed for the purpose of affording race horse betting to Chicago gamblers.

DR. NYE PLEADS GUILTY.

Ohio Legislator Admits Having Solicited a Bribe.

Columbus, O., Oct. 10.—Following the making of a full confession, in which he implicated other legislators and men "higher up" to Attorney General Hogan last Sunday in the presence of Prosecuting Attorney Edward C. Turner, of Franklin county, and a court stenographer, Dr. George B. Nye, representative in the lats legislature from Waverly, Pike county, late yesterday pleaded guilty to having solicited a bribe for his vote on the Kimball bill.

The indictment to which he pleaded guilty charged that he solicited a bribe of $1,000 from B. F. Kimball, the author of the bill, on April 18, 1911. The bill provided for the redistricting of the Pike and Adams county judicial districts. Dr. Nye was not sentenced yesterday.

HEAD COVERED WITH WHITE PIMPLES

Went to Ear, Shoulders and Whole Body. Thick and Sticky on Head. Eruption Covered With Blood. Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured.

Ranson, Ill.—"The trouble started on our baby when he was only about two weeks old. Started like little white pimples, looked like an old scab of blood and matter. His whole head was covered for a few months then it went to his ear, shoulders, and his whole body. It seemed to come out thick and sticky on his head, while on the other parts of his body it was more like water coming out of the skin. He would scratch until the eruption would be all covered with blood and gradually spread. The least little stir or rub would cause the sores to bleed, spread and itch. Never had a full night's sleep, restless all night.

"The sores were horrid to look at. It lasted until he was about two and a half years old. Then we saw an eczema advertisement in the paper to use ——; but it did no good. Then we used Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. We put the Cuticura Ointment on thick at bed time and put a tight hood on so he could not scratch the sores. Then we washed it clean with Cuticura Soap and warm water twice a day, and he was completely cured." (Signed) Mrs. E. F. Sulzberger, Dec. 30, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment are sold throughout the world. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

Tender-faced men should use Cuticura Soap Shaving Stick, 25c. Sample free.

A theatrical manager from Australia, writing in a dramatic paper as to conditions in that country, says: "The reason for the activity now being displayed in Australia in theatrical matters is that the country has attained a condition of prosperity entirely unprecedented. * * * Everyone has money for amusements." American players are popular, he says, particularly American actresses; but no American dialect play will succeed. Australia has dialects enough of her own.

THE "COURT OF SORROWS"—NEVERTHELESS A COURT OF HOPE

Judge of "Domestic Relations" Tribunal, Who Could Not Endure the Grinding Misery of It, Tells of the Tragic Procession of Women and Girls That Files Endlessly Through This Unique Courtroom.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Supposing you were a kind-hearted individual, easily moved to real sympathy by the tragic sorrows of others, and supposing that day after day poor, heartbroken women and children filed before you, each with a tale of woe, averaging about ten cases every day for sixteen months—over 3,000 such stories of trouble, heart-crushing trouble—would that make you gloomy?

Judge Charles N. Goodnow, of the court of domestic relations, has left that bench.

"I am done," he said. "The work is terrific, and the strain on one's sympathies, the daily grind of heart cases, has begun to wear me out.

"I have seen so much of misery and sorrow and unhappiness in my court that the world has begun to take on a dark and dismal hue. So much woe has been unfolded before me that it has become a part of me."

What is this court of domestic relations?

Let Judge Goodnow answer.

"It is a court of sorrows, into which comes grim-visaged woe and misery unspeakable; where drunkenness, poverty and ignorance walk hand-in-hand with brutality, starvation and immorality.

"In almost every instance the court deals with the adult offender against the woman and child. While the juvenile court deals with the delinquent and dependent child (the effect), the 'court of sorrows' reaches the cause."

Last year 1,548 deserted wives came before Judge Goodnow, and each told a story of a husband's neglect of them and their children. During the same time 624 children came and told of crimes committed against them. And 540 young girls came and told in low, sobbing voices "the story of the nameless babe."

"True, it has its rewards," added Judge Goodnow. "I like to see the smile come into a wasted cheek and the light sparkle in a tear-dimmed eye; I like to give the girl another chance to get right; and to bring together the husband and wife.

"This little girl, weeping because she has been found out; the girl who stands an outcast already, but whose only 'crime' is that she trusted too well and was wronged; the woman whose husband has proven false to his vows and his duty; all tear on a fellow's heartstrings."

"What causes contribute most to domestic infelicity?" I asked the judge.

"Ignorance, misconception of duties, rights and privileges; drink; laziness; poverty; early marriages; dissatisfaction with conditions and surroundings; interference of near relatives or meddling friends; ill health; and last, but not least, pure 'cussedness.'"

In the "court of sorrows," on the ninth floor of the big city hall, things are run differently from other court rooms. Everybody interested in the case crowds around the judge, each telling his or her own story. Sometimes several are talking at the same time; most always the women and children are crying, the men defiant and ugly. From the several stories the judge picks out the "right answer."

The right answer may mean sending a wayward girl to an institution or a deserting husband to jail until he makes up his mind to support his family; it may mean turning the child over to the officers of the Juvenile Protection association, or the abandoned wife to the united charities.

This court does away with the delays that confront one in the other courts. The abandoned wife or wronged child may come to the "court of sorrows" and have the case settled often the same day, at least within a few days.

It does a deal of good in repairing family relations and guarding the weak and frail, but it's tough on the judge, especially if he has a real, human heart in him.

Gov. Marshall Tells of the Trust Fight Against Binder Twine.

CAMPAIGNS IN IOWA

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 10.—The Harvester trust, of which George W. Perkins is supposed to be one of the principal stockholders, and who is alleged to be the financial backer of Colonel Roosevelt's campaign by Governor Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana, came in for its share of condemnation at the hands of the democratic vice presidential candidate in his address here last night. The governor declared the trusts had made repeated efforts to prevent the manufacture of binder twine in the Indiana state prison and had employed underhand methods.

Governor Marshall was greeted by one of the largest audiences during his present speaking tour of the state. He spoke in the afternoon at the homecoming celebration at Knoxville, where he touched upon what he called the unfulfilled promises of President Taft and former President Roosevelt to carry out the policies of the late President McKinley, as outlined by him in his memorable speech at Buffalo, N. Y., the day he was assassinated.

Following his account of how the harvester trust attempted to destroy the binder twine factory of the Indiana state prison, Governor Marshall launched into a detailed statement of the workings of the high tariff system. He said it had resulted in a protective trade in the articles purchased by the laboring man, while at the same time it fostered free trade in labor and this at the behest of the few individuals who profited by the protective tariff.

"Until a man has had some actual experience with the sinuous movements of the trusts he cannot understand the menace that they are to individual or collective success in America," the governor said.

"I scarcely had been elected governor of Indiana until the then warden of the Indiana state prison, James D. Reed, complained to me that the harvester trust men fixed their harvesting machines so that the prison-manufactured twine would not work in the binders. He told me they had attempted to buy up all the sisel and that even a trip to Guatemala was contemplated to get control of the raw material.

"This complaint has been going on until the present warden, E. J. Fogarty, started a fighting competition last year, when for the first time the prison has been able to sell its product at a profit and has reduced the price of twine from 13 cents, several years ago, to 6 cents a pound to the farmers.

"All this has been in the interest of the farmer. Honest competition cheerfully would have been met, but the little nameless things that are a part of the trust's methods to destroy competition could not be met except in the most drastic fashion.

"It is idle for me to draw conclusions for you on these questions if you will not draw them for yourselves. Since the world began competition was said to be the life of trade until the last ten years, since when the republican theory has been the death of trade."

Gang, Led by Rival Lover, Truss Up Youth in Lonely Cemetery.

Wabash, Ind., Oct. 10.—Tied to a tombstone in a cemetery, two miles from this city, where he was rescued by the police, was the experience of Barton Dawes, age eighteen, son of Postmaster L. A. Dawes, of this city, when he fell into the hands of unfriendly youths under the leadership of a rival. Young Dawes was on his way to the home of a young woman living on the south side of the city, when he was waylaid by a gang led by a young man who objected to the attentions Dawes was paying to the girl. A pedestrian saw the attack and reported the matter to the police, who could not find the postmaster's son for two hours.

FAMOUS OLD WAR SINGER IS DYING

Jules Lumbard, Whose Voice Enlisted 20,000 Men, is Near End.

CRAMPED BY POVERTY

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Jules Lumbard, the golden-voiced singer of the civil war, is critically ill.

The man whose voice popularized "The Battle Cry of Freedom" and lured 20,000 men to answer the war call of Abraham Lincoln is nearing the end of his long life of fame.

Lumbard is 84 years old, poverty stricken, and deserted save for the presence of an aged sister-in-law, Mrs. Mary Lumbard, in the three little rooms the couple have called home at 102 West Sixty-eighth street. He is dying of old age.

Yesterday he had sunk so low he was unable to recognize a few old friends and acquaintances, among them Will J. Davis, theatrical manager, who gave a benefit for the aged minstrel a year ago that was attended by many hundred Chicagoans.

Lincoln Paid Tribute.

Lumbard and a brother, Frank, now dead, sang their famous battle songs in Chicago in 1860 and subsequently toured the northern states, rousing enthusiasm in the war. General Grant declared that their singing brought 20,000 men to the Union cause, and President Lincoln, speaking of them at a banquet, said:

"Let me tell you that two men—and they were not military men—by their singing have got more men to enlist in the United States army than fifty times 150 of our best recruiting officers ever addressed."

Hundreds of thousands heard Lumbard's tremendous basso-profundo in churches, recruiting stations and trenches, on battle fields, in convent halls and at practically every kind of gathering. His rendition of the patriotic "We'll rally 'round the flag, boys," gave enthusiasm to the nation.

Caused Firing to Cease.

Old soldiers tell how firing ceased in the "Yank" and "Johnny Reb" trenches when Jules and Frank Lumbard sang. It was on the road from Bull Run to Appomattox, in 1863, when the Lumbards were calling on Union friends at the front. Some one had asked them to sing.

From a thicket came a cry, "Hello, Yanks, isn't that Jules and Frank Lumbard singing?"

"Hello, Johnny," was the answer, "you're right. Stop firing and you can hear."

And the story goes that the firing did cease while the Lumbards sang, and that their last selection brought tears to the eyes of the soldiers on both sides, for they sang "Home, Sweet Home."

Jules Lumbard was born at Honeoye Falls, Monroe county, New York, April 18, 1831. When eight years old he began to roam through many states, learning to be a telegrapher and later a printer. In Tuscumbia, Ala., where he remained for several years, he met Miss Marry Elliott, daughter of an old southern family, but soon after their marriage climatic conditions made necessary a journey north and they came to Chicago. Mrs. Lumbard died several years ago.

Laughed About Reverses.

Lumbard always laughed about his financial reverses. At one time he made more than $300,000 in the oil fields of Pennsylvania and moved with his wife to New York, where they had everything they wanted. The fortune was lost and the life of luxury, as the singer once expressed it, left him "with the habits of a prince and the means of a pauper."

Mr. Lumbard was at one time general traffic manager of the Pennsylvania railroad at Omaha, and the pension of $45 a month from this company has constituted his only income during the last ten years in Chicago.

John M. Hubbard, assistant postmaster of Chicago, Frank Lumbard and Charles M. Smith were his associates in the famous Lumbard quartet in 1860. It was while with this organization that Jules Lumbard sang "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," the first time it was heard in Chicago.

Woman of 21 Confesses to Long Series of Store Robberies.

SAYS SHE'LL REFORM

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Mrs. Maude Wilbur, of Syracuse, N. Y., brought here from Columbus, Ohio, by state's attorney's detectives told yesterday of robbing some of the biggest stores in New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago, according to State's Attorney Wayman. Although only 21 years old, the woman is said to have compressed into two years more daring exploits than occur to the average woman criminal in a life time. She said she is a graduate of a Syracuse high school and that she had received further educational training in an Ottowa, Ont., convent.

Mrs. Wilbur was arrested as she stepped from the doors of the Ohio penitentiary where she had completed a ten months' sentence for stealing from a Cleveland store. She was brought here on a fugitive warrant and will be tried on a charge of robbing a State street department store.

"They say the 'wages of sin is death,'" she said today, "but I have found that the wages of sin is hell. As a girl I had everything I wanted. I wanted to marry a young man whom I met on a train coming home from Ottowa for Christmas one year and did so against the wishes of my parents. Within a short time I was cast adrift and forced to earn my own living.

"I got work in a department store and discovered that either I had to steal to get presentable clothes or accept the proferred friendship of men inside and outside the store. The wages I was able to earn amounted to a grim joke. As against the men I choose to become a thief and while I am 'down and out,' as they say on the street, I prefer jail to some other things. I believe still that I have a chance for better things when prison days are over.

"I have spirit and some honor, the best kind, left. No prison can take those from me. Of course the criminal life does not pay, and I think I have learned that lesson. With the valuable lessons of life learned in the last two years, I am planning to start anew when I have served whatever sentence is imposed on me here."

When you are thinking of a fine suit of clothes—think of our store.

I Am Willing To Prove I Can Cure You

To That End I Am Giving Away $10,000 Worth of Medicine

In order to show beyond all doubt that I am in possession of a medicine that will cure kidney trouble, bladder trouble or rheumatism, I will this year give away ten thousand dollars' worth of this medicine, and anyone suffering from these diseases can get a box of it absolutely free. All that is necessary is to send me your address.

I don't mean that you are to use a part of it or all of it and pay me if cured. I mean that I will send you a box of this medicine absolutely free of charge, a gift from me to the Uric Acid sufferers of the world, so I can show them where and how they may be cured. I will not expect payment for this free medicine, nor would I accept it now or later if you sent it. It is free in the real meaning of the word.

DR. T. FRANK LYNOTT who is giving away $10,000 worth of medicine.

For twenty-five years—a quarter of a century—I have been trying to convince the public that I have something genuine, something better than others have for the cure of stubborn, chronic rheumatism, for torturing kidney backache, for annoying calls to urinate. But it is hard to convince people—they try a few things unsuccessfully and give up all hope and refuse to listen to anyone thereafter. Happily, I am in a position now to demonstrate to sufferers at my own expense that I have a medicine that cures these diseases. I don't ask them to spend any money to find out: I don't ask them to believe me; nor even to take the word of reliable people, but all I ask is that they allow me to send them the medicine at my own cost. That is surely fair.

To this end I have set aside ten thousand dollars, which will be used to compound my medicine. Much of it is ready now to be sent out, all of it fresh and standard. There will be enough for all sufferers, though there be thousands of them. And anyone who needs it can get some of it free. But in order that I shall know that you have a disease for which this medicine is intended, I ask you to send me some of your leading symptoms. If you have any of the symptoms in the list printed here you need my medicine and if you will write me I will gladly send you a box of it free with full directions for your use. Look the symptoms over, see which symptoms you have, then write me about as follows: "Dear Dr., I notice symptoms number"—here put down the numbers, give your age, full address, and send it to me. My address is Dr. T. Frank Lynott, 9171 Deagan Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

The ten thousand dollars I am spending for the compounding of my medicine is only a part of the money I am devoting to this cause, for the package of medicine I send you will be fully prepaid at my expense. From any standpoint you view it, YOU incur no expense or obligation. Just tell others who you know are suffering who sent you the medicine that cured you.

I am promising to give away ten thousand dollars' worth of medicine, and I will do that; I am promising to send any sufferer who writes me a box of this medicine and full directions free of charge, and I will do that. I can say further that this medicine has been vouched for according to law as complying in every detail with all requirements. It will stop rheumatism, it will stop pain and backache, it will stop too frequent desire to urinate; it will heal, soothe and strengthen. You will be better in every way for having taken it. There is not an ingredient that can injure; not one but will benefit. All that I ask is that you use it yourself so that you may be personally convinced.

Owing to the large number of requests, I have had ten thousand more copies of my medical book printed. This book is new and up to date and contains complete descriptions, symptoms, causes, effects and cures of kidney, bladder and rheumatic diseases. All who write for the free medicine will be sent a copy of this grand illustrated medical book—the largest ever written on these diseases for free and general distribution.

If you need medicine such as I have, if you are anxious to be cured and don't want to spend any money LOOKING for cures, write me. Read the symptoms over and let me hear from you today.

These Are the Symptoms:

1—Pain in the back.
2—Too frequent desire to urinate.
3—Burning or obstruction of urine.
4—Pain or soreness in the bladder.
5—Prostatic trouble.
6—Gas or pain in the stomach.
7—General debility, weakness, dizziness.
8—Pain or soreness under right rib.
9—Swelling in any part of the body.
10—Constipation or liver trouble.
11—Palpitation or pain under the heart.
12—Pain in the hip joint.
13—Pain in the neck or head.
14—Pain or soreness in the kidneys.
15—Pain or swelling of the joints.
16—Pain or swelling of the muscles.
17—Pain and soreness in nerves.
18—Acute or chronic rheumatism.

They Once Talked of Mining for Coal in Springfield Township, Allen County

Historical Sketch Written in 1867 Told of Some Possibilities in That Direction, and Contains Much Interesting Information.

Did you know that forty-five years ago they were considering the proposition of mining for coal within fourteen miles of Fort Wayne? The locality which seemed to offer prospects in this direction was Springfield township, this county. An interesting historical sketch of the township, reprinted from Bailey's directory of Fort Wayne and Allen county, published in 1867, is as follows:

Springfield township is located in the northeastern part of Allen county, fourteen miles northeast from Fort Wayne, the county seat. The nearest shipping points are Woodburn station, on the Toledo, Wabash and Western railway, six miles south from the center of the township. Cedarville, the head of slack water navigation on the St. Joseph river, six miles west, and Fort Wayne, fourteen miles southwest.

The first settlement was made in the spring of 1836, by William Glaze and family, consisting of his wife and son, and William Sweet and wife, with one son and two daughters. William Glaze built the first house in the township, just west of the site of the present village of Maysville, on the land now owned and occupied by Isaac Dresbach. This same season (1836) Isaac Hall, Ezra May, William Ringwalt, Henry Gruber and a man by the name of King, settled in the township. The township was organized in the year 1837. It was named by Isaac Hall, esq., after Springfield township, Summit county, Ohio, his former home. Ezra May, esq., was the first justice of the peace. The first couple married were Isaac Hall to Miss Jane S. Burdue. The first birth was a son to Henry and Lelou Gruber. The first death was Mary Eliza, daughter of Ezra and Anna May. The first school house was erected near the site of the present village of Maysville, and Miss Anna S. Bracy, now the wife of James Ireland, esq., taught the first term of school within the township. The oldest settler now living in this township is Samuel Omo, aged 83 years, and was a veteran soldier under the first Napoleon. There are two postoffices, one (Hall's Corners, John Shaffer, postmaster) in the northeastern part of the township, and one (Harlan, John Beechgood, postmaster) in the village of Maysville. The office at Hall's Corners was named after Isaac Hall, formerly postmaster, and the Harlan office was called after the Hon. Andrew Harlan, a member of congress at the time the office was located or established. There are seven churches now built, and one in course of erection, in the township, as follows: Two Methodist Episcopal, having one hundred and thirty members; two Methodist Protestant, having seventy members; two Lutheran, having one hundred and thirty members, and one United Brethren, having forty members.

The Methodist Episcopal church in Maysville, built in the year 1849, was the first church edifice erected in the township. The Lutheran church, three miles east from Maysville, was built in 1852. In the year 1856 three churches were built, viz: The United Brethren, in Maysville; the Methodist Episcopal church, four miles east from Maysville, and the Methodist Protestant, four miles northeast from Maysville. In the year 1858 a Methodist Protestant church was built in the village of Cuba, one mile southwest from Maysville. The last church built in the township was the Lutheran church in 1860, near the center of the township. There is also a church in course of erection, one mile north from the center of the township. In the township there are twelve schools and eleven school houses, classified as follows: One brick, nine frame and one log building—eleven common and one graded school; two steam grist mills, five steam saw mills, using annually about eight thousand merchantable logs; one shingle mill, eight stores and groceries, four boot and shoe establishments, one harness shop, four wagon shops, eight blacksmith shops, one tailor shop, one cabinet shop, one butcher shop, one livery stable, one gunsmith shop, one cooper shop, one tavern, three ministers, residing in the township; four physicians, one Masonic lodge, with a membership numbering 38, and holding its regular meetings the first Friday on or preceding the full of the moon. There are, in the township two towns, or villages, bearing the names, respectively, of Maysville and Cuba. Population about 2,000.

Maysville, the principal village and place of business, is situated one mile west, and two miles south, from the center of the township, and is fourteen miles northeast from Fort Wayne. It derives its name from Ezra May, esq., one of the first settlers, and the original proprietor of the land, upon which a portion of the village is built. He erected the first steam saw mill and owned the first store in the township, on the present site of Maysville. The village, at the present time, contains a population of 250 inhabitants. It has one steam grist mill, three steam saw mills, one shingle mill, one postoffice, two churches, five stores, one grocery, two wagon shops, three blacksmith shops, two boot and shoe shops, one saddle and harness shop, one cabinet shop, one tailor shop, one livery stable, two common and one graded school, one tannery (in course of erection,) one Masonic lodge and three physicians.

Cuba is situated one mile southwest from Maysville, contains a population of fifty, has one grist mill (not now in operation), one steam saw mill, one store, one blacksmith shop, one church, one schoolhouse, one physician and one cooper shop. Of the streams that run through the township, the St. Joseph river, running in a southwest course, through the northwest corner of the township, and Black Creek, rising near the center of the township, and running in a southeasterly course, drains the south half of the township. The surface of the country is rolling, and at the time of its first settlement was covered by as fine a body of timber as grew on the same amount of land in any portion of the west. The principal timber is black walnut, poplar, butternut, white, black and blue ash, white, red and burr oak, sugar maple, elm, bass-wood, cottonwood, wild cherry, beech and hickory. The soil is principally clay and sandy loam, yields well, and in favorable seasons, when well attended to, turns out crops equal to the best lands of the west. Stone coal, of a good quality, has been found in several different localities within the township, at an average depth of forty feet below the surface. It is expected that an attempt will soon be made to ascertain its extent, the thickness of the coal seam, and the possibility of its being worked profitably. There are numerous artesian, or fountain, wells located in the southeastern part of the township. The water is obtained by boring to a depth, varying from twenty-five to forty feet, when the water rises through a tube, prepared for that purpose, from three to six feet above the surface of the earth, and continues so to flow for months and years without any seeming increase or decrease of the supply. The fountain water has never been analyzed but it undoubtedly possesses medicinal qualities of a superior order. The inhabitants of this township are an enterprising, thrifty and industrious people, as a class, and have converted a wilderness into smiling fields and pleasant homes, where contentment and plenty now repay them for their early hardships and toil.

CLEAN YOUR LIVER AND 30 FEET OF BOWELS WITH "SYRUP OF FIGS"

More effective than calomel, castor oil or salts; gently cleanses the stomach, liver and bowels without nausea or griping. Children dearly love it.

You know when your liver is bad, when your bowels are sluggish. You feel a certain dullness and depression, perhaps the approach of a headache, your stomach gets sour and full of gas, tongue coated, breath foul, or you have indigestion. You say, "I am bilious or constipated and I must take something tonight."

Most people shrink from a physic—they think of castor oil, calomel, salts or cathartic pills.

It's different with Syrup of Figs. Its effect is as that of fruit; of eating coarse food; of exercise. Take a teaspoonful of delicious Syrup of Figs tonight and you won't realize you have taken anything until morning, when all the clogged up waste matter, sour bile and constipation poisons move on and out of your system, without gripe, nausea or weakness. Nothing else cleanses and regulates your sour, disordered stomach, torpid liver and thirty feet of waste-clogged bowels like gentle, effective Syrup of Figs. Don't think you are drugging yourself. Being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics, it can not cause injury.

If your child is cross, sick and feverish, or its little stomach sour, tongue coated, give Syrup of Figs at once. It's really all that is needed to make children well and happy again. They dearly love its pleasant taste.

Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," and look on the label for the name—California Fig Syrup Company. That, and that only, is the genuine. Refuse any other fig syrup substitute with contempt.—Adv.

SAYS EXPORTS SHOULD BE MORE

German Salesman Says Better Methods Would Increase Trade

WITH HIS COUNTRY

Washington, Oct. 10.—"Americans are children in commercial dealings abroad," said Wilhelm Schmidt, of Cologne, Germany. Mr. Schmidt represents an American firm in Germany, and has been making a tour of the United States.

"In saying this, I do not mean to criticise the business ability of Americans or their sagacity," said Mr. Schmidt, "and this expression is not my own. American consular officers in many German cities have often made the same observation. Perhaps the seeming inability of some American manufacturers and exporters to compete with those of Europe is due to the fact that they do not depend upon their foreign trade, having plenty of business at home. Nevertheless there is an effort, apparently, to extend business with European countries.

"It is evident, however, that the American manufacturer does not know how to get foreign business. He will send handsome catalogues to the foreign trade, but when it comes to extending credit he insists that the foreigners shall observe the same custom of paying for goods in thirty or sixty days, while his competitors among European manufacturers will give his customers almost any time they ask for.

"Again, instead of sending abroad salesmen who are familiar with foreign countries and able to talk the language of the country where they go, the American will send men who can speak only English. This necessarily places them at a great disadvantage. Now while the American trade in Europe is on the increase, it is not growing at the rate it should. It can be extended largely if the manufacturers and exporters go about it in the right way, for I must say that American made goods, particularly shoes, are in high favor, especially in Germany."

CELEBRATES HER 100TH BIRTHDAY

Girl Friend of "Mollie Pitcher" Tells About Her Life.

MUST BE TEMPERATE

Carlisle, Pa., Oct. 10.—Entertaining friends and acquaintances here, Mrs. Samuel Sipe, of Carlisle, a girl friend of "Molly Pitcher," the heroine of Monmouth, celebrated her one hundredth birthday. Mrs. Sipe was born in Switzerland, October 5, 1812, and came to this country when she was six years old. She crossed the ocean in a sailing vessel, which took about six weeks to make the trip, landing in Philadelphia, where she lived one year before coming to Carlisle. Mrs. Sipe lived here ninety-three years.

Retaining all her faculties with the exception of her sight, which is slowly failing, Mrs. Sipe today is in good health. She said she expected to live several years longer. When told that a few friends were coming to see her she exclaimed:

"What for? I'm no curiosity. I'm only an ordinary human being."

Mrs. Sipe attributes her long life and good health to temperance in all things, especially in eating.

Mrs. Sipe well remembers "Mollie Pitcher," has talked with her often, hearing her tell of the battle of Monmouth and the good treatment she received at the hands of the soldiers.

"It took us about a week to go from Philadelphia to Carlisle," said the centenarian, "as we travelled by stage coach, and the roads were not very good in those times."

The first railroad train which was operated by the Cumberland Valley Railroad company, Mrs. Sipe said, caused much excitement in Carlisle, as the trial trip was made on July 4, 1857, the train making a trip of about two and a half miles.

Mrs. Sipe lives here with her daughter, Miss Kate Sipe, and her son, Dr. John E. Sipe, a druggist.

IS CURED BY SHOCK.

Deaf Man Hears Himself Shout After Accident.

Victoria, B. C., Oct. 10.—At Kamloops recently Andrew Forsyth, after having been "stone" deaf and totally dumb for a period exceeding fourteen years, suddenly recovered both senses as the result of a shock. The good fortune of Mr. Forsyth was practically synonymous with the misadventure which cost John Edmunds his life.

Edmunds has been helping himself to a ride on a train as it ran slowly through the city, and, losing his footing, fell to death under the wheels. Forsyth was one of those who ran forward to gaze at the body, and in his horror he screamed.

He heard his own shout and also the talk of others, and forthwith joined in the conversation, although his lips had framed no word for almost fifteen years.

Neither the physicians nor Forsyth attempt to explain the miracle, except in saying that the sudden shock succeeded where medical and surgical science had proved of no avail.

SAYS MOTORISTS ABANDON LIQUOR

The Business Started to Go Backward Ten Years Ago.

IS TOO EXPENSIVE

Kansas City, Oct. 10.—The motor car has put an end to wine drinking as a fine art, according to Maj. R. E. Mills, inspector of passenger train and station service for the Illinois Central railroad, who, previous to six years ago, was a champagne salesman and one of the wine experts of the country.

"The wine business began to decline ten years ago, coincident with the appearance of the motor car," he said at the hotel White. "The class of people who drink such beverages liked just a touch of the Bohemian existence. They were neither rich nor poor, but could afford to drink a little wine now and then, both because they liked it and because it was the fashion. With the advent of the motor car, however, society demanded a car of people in such circumstances. The cost of keeping a car and the wine bill were about the same. The ordinary man could not afford both and the wine has been sacrificed. Only 20 per cent. as much is consumed now as was purchased ten years ago. Most of the railroads have stopped serving it. The 'grape' is no longer served on the Twentieth Century limited and the Pennsylvania's eighteen-hour train, or Illinois Central trains, because the demand has ceased. Motor cars, the high tariff and the spread of temperance has killed the wine industry in this country."

BEE BRINGS WOE TO THE STUDENTS

Girls of Sorority Have "Awful" Time When Horse Runs Away.

BEE ATTACKS HORSE

Palo Alto, Cal., Oct. 10.—A honey bee, a team of frightened horses and four injured Stanford girl students represent the actors in a near tragedy which has just come to light.

Secrecy on the part of the sorority sisters of the injured girls, broken only by the abrupt arrival on the campus of the remains of a badly wrecked livery rig, kept hidden the details of a runaway which occurred on the La Honda grade and which, in addition to ending a "rushing" party of the Greek letter society, necessitated the service of a surgeon for Miss Mildred Hayes, daughter of J. O. Hayes, of San Jose, and niece of Representative E. A. Hayes; Miss Ruth Pinkerton, of Pacific Grove; Miss Florence Mackey, of Los Angeles, and Miss D. Doud, of Pasadena.

Twelve members of the Gamma Phi Beta sororiety, with four "rushees," among whom was Miss Doud, were on their way to La Honda for a picnic when a lonely bee stung one of the horses attached to the surrey driven by Miss Pinkerton and caused the team to dash down the steep grade.

Just ahead was another surrey of the party and the occupants pulled their surrey to the side of the road. Miss Hayes leaped from the buggy and was thrown beneath the wheels of the second vehicle, suffering a fractured rib and numerous bruises about the face and body. Miss Mackay and Miss Doud were in the same carriage and were badly cut and bruised. Miss Edith Hutchinson, the fourth occupant, escaped unhurt. The two carriages crashed together and Miss Pinkerton, the driver of the frightened team, was thrown from her seat.

When the two carriages met the horses of the second rig were freed and ran two miles down the mountain side before being captured by John Strong, of La Honda.

COMMUNICATION FROM BOARD OF PUBLIC SAFETY.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 25, 1912.

W. S. Cutshall, Controller, City of Fort Wayne:

Dear Sir:—Will you please arrange for an appropriation of three hundred and fifty dollars to "police station account?" We find that this amount will be needed to meet the expenses of the police department for the remainder of the year, owing to the fact that the auto patrol needed repairing and overhauling which necessitated the hiring of an automobile during the time the auto patrol was in the paint shop, and the feeding of prisoners, which the county heretofore paid, was added to this department. We believe that this amount will be more than returned to the general fund from the police force pay roll. Hoping you may be able to see your way clear to recommend this appropriation to the council, we remain very respectfully,

J. C. HUTZELL,
MARION B. JOHNSON,
W. D. HENDERSON,

To the Common Council.

Your committee on streets and alleys to whom was referred a resolution in regard to the platting of streets and alleys in the city of Fort Wayne, beg to report that we feel that it is the duty of the board of public works and the county commissioners to assist the future development and growth of this city by demanding a uniform platting of all new additions, and we recommend that a copy of the resolutions and this report be sent to the board of public works and the county commissioners, with request that the board of works adopt a model platting, showing the dimensions of the lots, width of alleys and streets and the direction of the streets and alleys, which platting will provide for the running of any and all pole lines through the alleys, both north and south and east and west, and that all proposed additions to the city of Fort Wayne be refused admission to the city unless the platting of said additions coincide with the said model plans.

We also recommend that after said model plan is made up copies of same be distributed to real estate owners within the four-mile limit of the city of Fort Wayne, so as to enable them to properly lay out and plat their grounds before disposing of the grounds in small parcels.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CHAIRMEN OF THE COMMITTEES ON FINANCE AND PUBLIC PARKS AND BUILDINGS TO THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 20, 1912.

Board of Public Works, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Gentlemen: On September 10, 1912, at a regular session of the common council, a communication providing an approach for the proposed Barthold street bridge, and relative to the straightening of the St. Mary's river at and near the new proposed bridge, was referred to the committees on finance and public parks and buildings.

The committees held a meeting Monday evening, Sept. 16, and decided we should ask the board of public works to furnish the committees of finance and public parks and buildings with plans, specifications and the cost of the same, according to the communication as referred to us.

We trust you will give this your prompt attention.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS TO THE CHAIRMEN OF THE COMMITTEES ON FINANCE AND PUBLIC PARKS AND BUILDINGS.

Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 25, 1912.

Messrs. Charles E. Welch and Harry C. Prieger.

Gentlemen: Your communication relative to furnishing the committees on finance and parks and public buildings with plans, specifications and cost of straightening the St. Mary's river and providing a suitable approach to the proposed Barthold street bridge, has been referred to Mr. F. M. Randall, city civil engineer, who informs us that, owing to the importance of the proposed work, it will take some time to make an intelligent estimate of the cost of said work. It is a problem requiring much study and care, on account of the uncertainty of the character of the soil underlying the surface. The straightening of the river will require the construction of retaining walls of great strength to resist the high water and heavy ice which may occur annually. We therefore ask the people mostly interested in this project to exercise a little patience, assuring them of our hearty co-operation and approval of this matter, consistent with the laws under which we are operating.

Respectfully yours,

BOARD OF PUBLIC WORKS.

THIS POLICE CHIEF STOPPING CRIME BY GIVING THE "DOWN-AND-OUTER" ANOTHER CHANCE.

The Remarkable Story of August Vollmer, Who Opposes "Third Degree"—Uses Human Kindness in Enforcing the Law, and Holds His Job.

—G

Berkley, Cal., Oct. 10.—Suppose you were a poor man, shorty out of the penitentiary.

Suppose you were trying to make an honest living as a peddler.

Suppose you should one day be arrested, thrown into jail and told you must go to trial after four men had identified you as the bandit in a highway robbery you had never committed.

Then suppose the chief of police should come to you and say: "I've investigated. I believe you are innocent and your arrest and identification are unfortunate mistakes. I am going to defend you."

Sounds almost unbelievable, doesn't it, in these days of "third degree" and "conviction at any cost?"

Well, it's true, and that's only a very small end to it. The story of it will do you good. It's a remarkable story. Chief of Police August Vollmer, of Berkeley, is a remarkable man.

First, he believes that the police should help a man who has fallen to get on his feet again; he believes that where they can they should provide jobs for unfortunates; that they should not point to the number of arrests as an indication of the efficiency of the department, rather they should show the absence of crime.

And Vollmer not only preaches this to his men, but he practices it himself.

Recently three street cars were held up in Berkeley. Certain things pointed to George Batteatta as the man. Batteatta was a post graduate of two California penitentiaries. So they brought him to the station and there four of the six men, the crew of the cars, said: "That's the man."

Batteatta told the chief his story, not under the third degree, but frankly. He told the chief that he had sold his only possession in the world, an accordeon, for $14; that with this money he had hired a peddler's wagon and was trying to make an honest living.

"I am inocent, chief," he cried, as they took him to his cell. Vollmer didn't go on the identification of this man as proof positive that he was the bandit. He investigated and he found proof, irrefutable circumstantial evidence which proved to him that the man was innocent.

CHIEF AUGUST VOLLMER, OF BERKELEY.

He told the district attorney, but his answer was that the man must go to trial. Without friends or money, Batteatta would have gone to prison for life. But Vollmer got behind him.

"I'll defend you," he told the accused man; "I'll see that you get justice."

He also guaranteed the expense for the defence. But before Batteatta was tried another man held up a street car in San Francisco. He killed himself while in a running pistol fight. And it was proved, absolutely, that the ex-convict whom Chief Vollmer was going to defend was not the man, and that the dead bandit was the one.

But that was just one incident in the police rule of August Vollmer.

There are dozens of others like it; there are men in Berkeley today who committed petty acts of crime, who have been set on their feet by Vollmer. One man uttered a fictitious check because his children were starving. Vollmer straightened out the matter and got the man a job. Today that man is making good.

"Who benefited by helping the man who issued the check?" smiled Vollmer. "The state and the man. By sending him to jail we would have had to pay $30 a month to support him; $1,000 to convict him; $21 a month to keep his helpless family. That man had obligations he wanted to assume. We helped him assume them and the state and the man are better off than if he were in prison."

It's an unwritten law of the Berkeley police department that any officer trying to make a record of many arrests will find himself on the carpet for a "calling down."

"I don't want a record of this kind made," emphatically exclaimed the chief. "I want the men to show that their beats are free from crime, and if they show this I don't care whether they ever make an arrest or not.

"Of course, we haven't the three greatest sources of crime—the saloon, restricted district and gambling houses. That makes it easier.

"There are three classe of criminals," he went on to explain. "First, the inherent, defective criminal; second, the habitual criminal who is more a victim of environments than anything else, and third, the occasional criminal. In this last class is the greatest number we have to deal with. In it is the man whom temptation and opportunity turn into a thief, and lastly, there is the man who can't help himself—the man who would rather commit a crime than beg."

Vollmer brought his fist down on the desk.

"And I firmly believe that it is a great mistake that the state or nation doesn't take some steps to help this class. I don't believe a policeman should be a brute; nor do I believe in the 'third degree.' I believe a police officer should help those who need help; that the department should help find jobs for the needy, and that wherever there is the slightest doubt in the minds of the officers that a man is guilty that they should give the accused the benefit of that doubt."

GEORGE BATTEATTA, WHO, SO FAR AS IS KNOWN, IS THE ONLY ACCUSED MAN WHOM A POLICE CHIEF EVER OFFERED TO DEFEND.

That's the reason August Vollmer, Berkeley's police chief, is always ready to help those who need help and who will accept it; it's the reason why he believes a little kindness, and "common sense" will do more to reform a man who has offended than all the penitentiaries ever erected.

And it's also the reason why you are apt to get a punch on the nose from the average Berkeley resident if you start running down their police chief.

THE NEW EARTH

By Mrs. WILSON WOODROW

THERE was something wrong about the new machinery in the "Little Loo" mine, and Alma's father, who was the foreman, having no one else to call upon for the errand, had sent her after Jessop. Jessop was an expert mechanician who had recently struck it rich on his lease in the "Left-Over," and thereafter worked intermittently and at the promptings of his humor, devoting instead much time to castle building, and selecting with peculiar fitness Spanish Alma as the mistress of his Castilian domains.

"He will not come," she said to her father. "You know he will not work since money is pouring in to him from his lease in the 'Left-Over.' And look at the snow!"

The gnarled old Spaniard set his lean jaw and gazed at her from under his beetling brows. His skin was like parchment. It clung to his bones and fell in heavy wrinkles in the hollows of his cheeks and about his mouth, but his dark eyes, fierce as a wild hawk's, were as brilliant and piercing as in youth.

"He will come if you ask him," he said curtly. "There is no one else understands the new machinery. I'm supposed to, but I haven't got the hang of it yet. The work'll have to stop unless it's fixed soon. I'm responsible to my boss. You go."

She knew better than to refuse when he looked at her that way with his hawk's eyes; but it was with resentment and rebellion in her heart that she carefully folded and laid aside her wedding dress upon which she had meant to sew the whole of this Monday, threw over her shoulders a heavy, long cape, twisted a crimson scarf about her head, and started up the hill to Jessop's cabin.

Her progress was necessarily slow. Many ore wagons from the "Left-Over," a mile up the hill, had cut the snow into great ruts which made walking difficult, and where it was smoother, it was exceedingly slippery. But Alma was a tireless creature, supple as a whalebone, and used to climbing over the mountains at all seasons of the year and in all kinds of weather.

When she had climbed as far as the "Left-Over" mine, she paused a few moments to rest, and circling the great ore dump, sat down on a little bench outside the engine house and drew a long breath. Two men who were unloading ore from the cars gliding along the shining steel tracks from the black depths of the tunnel house stopped a moment to give an eager greeting to the girl. She asked at once if Jessop were at the mine, explaining the difficulty at the "Little Loo," but they both assured her that he was not and had not been there for several days. He'd been laying off to fix up something about his cabin, they believed.

With a heavy sigh and several foreboding shakes of the head, Alma wrapped her heavy cape more closely around her and started on, not forgetting, however, to thank the two men very prettily, that is, audibly; and to thank them still more prettily, inaudibly, with dark eyes shining through a fluttering mesh of long lashes and wonderful dimples all tangled up in an unbelievably adorable smile.

About a quarter of a mile above the "Left-Over" she crossed a bridge which spanned a deep and narrow crevasse, a gash which cleft the great mountain to its foundation. Alma lingered a moment, and leaning on the railing looked down curiously into those mysterious depths. The white walls of the sharp, irregular declivity reflected many cold, prismatic lights; and down, far down where the eye could no longer distinguish shapes and outlines, there lay a shadow like steam from some vast, subterranean caldron, blue, dense, impenetrable.

At last she went on, but her step was laggard now, and a few feet on the other side of the bridge she paused frowningly to contemplate a narrow trail which turned from the road at a sharp right angle and led to Jessop's cabin. Her approach had evidently been noted from the window, for Jessop, big and brawny, red-haired, freckled, insouciant to recklessness, appeared in the hastily thrown open door.

"Alma!" he cried, exhibiting the liveliest surprise. "What in the name of everything! I didn't expect to see you again till you were Mrs. Jack Tillotson. I hear the banns have been twice called. Sure you ain't the Spring walking over the snow? I've felt her coming for the last few days."

"The 'Little Loo,'" she said hastily and wearily. "Something's wrong with that new machinery and pop's all in. He wants you to come down and fix it."

"All right," said Jessop briefly, "but I guess there ain't any great hurry. You look pretty well in yourself."

She shook her head, but it was a perfunctory dissent.

"Come on in and sit by the stove awhile," he urged, stepping aside that she might enter. "I got to 'tend to some things here before I can go down, and you got to rest after such a climb. You want to dry your feet, too. Come on"—impatiently—"don't be a fool, I won't eat you."

"I ain't afraid of you, Bill. It would take even worse than you to scare me," she flashed back at him as she entered the cabin.

Jessop fussed about the room a moment, poking the fire, rattling a cup and saucer, moving the coffeepot to the front of the stove. "That's on the boil now," he said, lifting the lid and peering into it. "You need it. Just wait till I get you out some crackers. By a stroke of good luck I stocked up yesterday. Went down to camp and bought out the store, enough to last a month or more."

Alma's lithe young body was soon rested. The steaming, strong coffee refreshed and restored her as she sat beside the fire.

Although accepting Jessop's hospitality, she made no effort to show the least appreciation of it and replied to his questions with either a negative shake or an affirmative nod of her head. Finally, her last sip of coffee taken, she rose to her feet and prepared to depart.

"You can sure make good coffee," she admitted grudgingly.

"I can make other things, too," in light, quick, Irish boasting. "I can make money, and I can make love. You ought to know that."

She did not deign to answer, but threw him one swift glance of scorn and busied herself fastening her cape about her.

"Just wait till I give a last pokedown to the fire. There." He picked up his Mackinaw coat and fur cap. "Come." He paused in the doorway a moment, his reckless blue eyes looking deep into hers. "Lord! I'd sell my soul to the devil to keep you here forever!"

"What for should he buy what he already owns?" she mocked indifferently as she stepped out into the snow, and then fell back, gazing about her with a strange and startled expression. His eye reflected it as he too stared about him, with a look, not yet of alarm, but of wild, deep wonder. For the second that they waited the earth, too, seemed to wait—a solemn, awe-filled moment of incalculable change—a tense moment, as if the unknown, mysterious forces of Nature were gathering themselves together for some mighty, unprecedented effort. The solid ground beneath their feet trembled, as though from a deep convulsion, the white peaks seemed bowing and bending in a strange dance: then, there was a roar as of many waters, the air darkened, and earth and sky were full of flying snow.

Alma had fallen on her knees and was clinging blindly to the open door, her face blanched white, her lips muttering incoherent prayers, but Jessop leaned against the rough logs of his house and gazed with dazed and unbelieving eyes into this formless and whitely whirling world. He had looked upon a miracle. He had seen those immutable peaks, as stable as Time, bend and bow in their strange cosmic dance; for the change in the apparent position of one had created the illusory effect of a change in all. Gradually, as the air cleared, he saw that a new world lay about him. For a dozen yards before the cabin, his path, with its high white walls, was intact, but beyond that lay an incredibly smooth expanse of snow, one thin layer, it appeared, for the bare earth showed here and there in great patches. The road was obliterated, the vast, projecting rock ledges which had overshadowed it had disappeared. The great sweep of the avalanche had left not a tree standing. They had all been razed or else uprooted like the rocks and carried on in that irresistible rush. The light poured baldly down upon a hillside bare and blank and utterly featureless. But down the road where the bridge had spanned the crevasse there rose a vast white mountain, effectually cutting them off from all communication with the outside world.

Nothing remained of familiar surroundings. This was a new earth. At last, Jessop roused himself from his stunned contemplation of it and bent his eyes upon Alma's cowering, muttering figure. He gazed at her a moment in unsimulated surprise, unbelieving, as if she must be a part of the vision, this miracle that he had seen; then he leaned out from the sheltering wall and scanned with a measuring and speculative eye the white heap that rose from the crevasse and seemed almost to touch the lowering and sullen sky. Apparently satisfied, he gave one long whistle, and entering the cabin, began to build up the fires he had so carefully extinguished a short time before.

The crackling of the logs roused Alma, and she lifted her head, bent over her beads she had drawn from her pocket, and stared at him with wild eyes.

"Don't do that!" she cried sharply. "Come!"—struggling to her feet—"we must go—go—get away from here! Dios! Are you mad? It is the end of the world. Come quickly!"

"Where?" asked Jessop, with one of his queer, sarcastic smiles, throwing another log on the fire; for it was a peculiarity of his that his large living room held not only a small cooking stove, but a huge open fireplace.

"Home," she cried wildly, "to the church. We can at least die blessedly. We must get to the church."

"How?" asked Jessop, still laconic. "Look at that!" He pointed to the new mountain which rose from the gully.

"Alma, listen."

She looked up to meet his eyes sparkling with a thousand twinkling reflections of his mad mood.

"My friend the devil took me at my word. He's a better judge of a good bargain than you are."

Her eyes swept him briefly with a sort of furtive fear; then, without a word, she fell to telling her beads again.

"Why, Alma"—a virile note of power, as if some long-dreamed-of mastery were his at last, swelled like a diapason through his voice—"every man that's lived the kind of life that I have knows that there comes times when, do what he will, he can't buck up against the combination against him; and there's other times when his luck's just like a big cornucopia without a bottom, pouring a steady stream of good things on him. In the main, life's a damn cruel mistress. She'll bind burdens on you that'd break a burro's back; she'll make you work till your fingers split open and give you neither a fi'penny bit nor a thank ye; she'll break your heart and take all your money, the jade, and then give you the go-by. But there do come times, now and then, when she'll hang round your neck and be so soft and sweet that she makes up to you for every rotten trick she's ever played on you. Why, look at her now—the sweetheart! Look at my lease in the 'Left-Over'! Look how my ore's running! And"—he positively hugged himself at the thought—"I went down not a week ago and bought all these furnishings and fixings up!" He looked about him with pride. George! And to think I stocked up with provisions only yesterday! To think of it!"

"What do you mean?" Alma turned frowningly from her beads.

"That"—he pointed to the great wall between them and the camp—"that puts you in prison, right here, my girl." He spoke with deliberate and yet exultant triumph. "With me for your jailer!"

But it was only the supernatural that had power to terrify Alma, and now she threw her head back and faced him with blazing, furious eyes. "It's a lie!" she cried. "You think I'd stay here with you, Bill Jessop? Why, I'd rather throw myself in that snow mountain down there. There's some way to get home. I know that."

"Well, you know the mountain as well as I do," he said with a sort of sardonic indifference. "You think of it." He began to whistle through his teeth softly as he filled his pipe, carefully prodding the tobacco down with his thumb; then, seating himself comfortably in his chair, he lazily struck a match.

He seemed to be pondering something deeply, occasionally squinting an eye at the ceiling in abstruse calculation.

"It'll give us about ten undisturbed days," he said, speaking with the pipe between his teeth, his eyes following the smoke wreaths as they curled above the blazing logs on the hearth. "We're in for a big thaw, but it'll take time to melt down that mountain out there. They won't worry about us down in camp, for they know that you came here. They know that I'm stocked up. So they know that we're either comfortably dead in that snow out there, or comfortably alive here. Anyway, they'll be busy digging out the 'Left-Over' boys for the next few days. It'll be about a fortnight, Alma."

"A fortnight! Here with you?" she cried aghast. "Never! I'll kill you. I'll kill myself first."

Jessop whistled softly his one monotonous tune. "You won't feel that way long." His eyes were full of audacious laughter. "You'll come to me before those two weeks are up, and you'll put your arms around my neck, the same as life's doing now—just as soft and sweet—and you'll beg me to keep you here always."

"Dios!" Alma had tottered back at his unlicensed utterances, and stood with her arms stretched stiffly against the wall, her mouth open, staring at him in horrified incredulity. Then her hot blood flushed her cheek, her eyes narrowed and glittered, and like a cat she sprang at him and slapped him across his insolently smiling face. "Take that, dog!" she cried, "son of an ape!" She flung Spanish oaths at him with such force and heat that he told her they spluttered when they fell upon the cold of his frightened ears.

But the maddening smile still lingered on his lips as he bent to pick up the pipe her blow had sent flying to the floor. And still smiling, he stood for a moment caressing the white dents her fingers had left on his hard red cheek. Then carefully refilling his pipe he drew a table toward him, and sat for the rest of the day softly whistling and playing one game of solitaire after another.

Alma, for her part, retired to the darkest part of the cabin. Her attitude resembled that of a panther huddled sullenly in the back of its cage, feigning sleep yet warily watchful, listless yet tense, and ready at any moment for a spring.

When, at last, he announced supper by simply stating briefly, "The biscuits are done," Alma, who through the long hours of the afternoon had darkly contemplated starvation, hastily renounced the thought at the tempting sight and odor of the supper set before her, and sullenly, reluctantly, with the worst possible grace, accepted the chair Jessop offered, and ate avidly but in silence and with eyes resolutely downcast.

During the progress of the meal Jessop had surveyed had more than once with a speculative and somewhat quizzical glance, but had made no attempt to draw her into conversation, and at its conclusion, he deftly cleared away all traces of the supper, washing the dishes without requesting or even seeming to expect her assistance. Then lighting his pipe he ensconced himself in an easy chair, and devoted his attention to a pile of newspapers several days old. Long ago his isolated life had taught him the lesson, so difficult to one of his Irish blood, of silence, a lesson which Alma had yet to learn.

At last he rose and knocking the ashes from his pipe stood lazily contemplating his prisoner, who had retired to her distant corner and sat there in contemptuous disdain, the effect of which was somewhat marred by her appearance of watchfulness, which had increased a thousandfold.

With a humorous twist of the lip, Jessop turned and took from a nail on the wall a large key. This he threw upon the table near him, where it fell with a rattling clang. "I got two rooms to this cabin," he said. "This one's yours, the other's mine. There's the key of it, you can lock the door after I go in. I know you'd never trust me to do it." A smile sardonically mocking played for a moment about his lips.

"Put up that gun, pop." Alma's voice was lifted in imperious command.

Without even a glance at him, she extended her hand quickly and took up the key, neither did she respond to his teasing yet rather wistful "good night," and he had scarcely entered the adjoining room before the sound of a hastily turned key clicked in the lock.

But Alma was not used to inaction and had she attempted to maintain her attitude of the passive prisoner who scorned to assist her jailer in the necessary household tasks, it might have gone hard with her; but fortunately for her, during the next two or three days she found a channel for her energies. Daughter of the mountains as she was, she knew of various trails lying in different directions, and she was sure that one or two of these, if fully explored on snowshoes, would enable her to make the camp. Jessop, in spite of her voluble protestations, insisted on accompanying her, and together they two traversed many profitless miles alone in those white, monotonous wastes, whose stillness was only broken by the harsh cries of the coyotes and the howls of the mountain lion.

Reluctantly, bitterly, but still finally, Alma was at last forced to admit the truth of Jessop's earlier prognostications. They were pocketed in a nest of deep ravines, and the encircling mountains, stern bastions barring her way to home and happiness, soon convinced her that nothing remained for her to do but to await the great spring thaw, necessarily near at hand.

Alma was a child of the South, given to swift and sudden changes of temperament. She had sulked for days, had now and again given way to tears and bitter rebellion, until the pendulum had swung to its limit in the other direction. Her natural love of life and of gayety asserted itself; she must laugh, she must talk. Her spirits were as effervescent as champagne.

It was with no thought of entertaining Jessop that she allowed herself this gay truce in their warfare, and chose, for the moment, to disregard him in his official capacity—the enemy. She had, for the time, and with easy mental facility, relegated him to the same position as the chairs and tables. He served as audience, or, eclipsed by her more complete negation, background.

From the shadow he hurled himself into that zone of glowing firelight where she sparkled and fluttered. A white flame passed over his face and lighted his eyes with that burning, incandescent glow that only those cold, blue eyes can show. Primeval, all preliminary bowing and scraping in the minuet of wooing ignored, he saw his heart's desire, and seized it, lifting this flower of Spain in his mighty arms, crushing her against his breast until she, dazed for the moment, lay captured and captive, a tropical blossom adorning the frieze coat of the Celt.

But her second of surprised, involuntary non-resistance served her well. He looked into her eyes and forgot his vigilance; and, with a twist, Alma had slipped through his arms and was across the room, catching from the table she had set for breakfast a knife. Its cold blue glitter she concealed in a fold of her dress, her arm held at length for a long lunge, her head thrown back, a smile on her white lips, her eyes daring him.

Jessop took no dares. It was a part of his creed. He was across the room in a step. The steel flashed straight at him, no deflection of purpose there. At the same moment he caught her arm with a peculiar upward twist, and the knife whirled through the air over his head to clatter to the floor half a dozen feet behind him.

He dropped her wrist and stepped aside, punctiliously observing the rules of the game. She was free to pick up her sword and have at him again.

But Alma made no move to seize it. "There are other knives," she whispered bravely through her stiff lips, "and I will kill you sure if you ever try to lay a finger on me again." Then tacitly discarding the game at which she was predestined to lose, she instinctively drew from its scabbard her one invincible weapon—she covered her face with her hands and wept. "Oh, you are a devil," she moaned, "and you make me one. I would have killed you, I would. I am like that."

And Jessop was on his knees before her. "Alma!" he cried. "Forgive me. Why, you're as safe here as in your father's cabin. You see I ain't got used to having you around yet and I kind o' forget myself. It won't happen again. Why, Alma, you can keep me locked up there in the other room if you want to, and just pass my food through the door now and then when you feel like it."

But this circumstance did not serve as a thunder cloud clearing the air. Jessop had never been a favorite with Alma, and she ascribed the horrid accident of the avalanche, which kept her a prisoner in his cabin, to the malign powers of evil arrayed against her and with which she vaguely suspected him of being in collusion. Also, she resented bitterly the time which must elapse before she would be free, her delayed marriage, her unfinished wedding dress, and she fancied that her heart, her vain and fickle heart, pined and ached at the separation from her handsome, blonde Swede.

But in spite of the electrical atmosphere within the cabin, without, the slow procession of the passing days was infinitely dreary. The spring thaw which was to melt the mountain of snow in the ravine, was no longer presaged, but at hand.

One day, when she was more silent than usual, Jessop thought she looked pale and feared for her health. She had scarcely touched food, he remembered.

"What's the matter, Alma?" he asked. "Ain't you feeling well?" And Alma, crouching beside the low-burning fire, her eyes somberly, unseeingly upon it, had bent her head upon her knees and sobbed.

"It's my wedding day," she said, and wept afresh.

Jessop made no comment, merely puffed at his pipe.

Presently she brightened. "But we will set a new wedding day," she announced confidently, "as soon as I am out of this."

"Not now," said Jessop calmly, with another long draw on his pipe.

"What are you saying?" she cried, aflame in a moment. "Who's going to stop us? Not you. Bah!" She snapped disdainful fingers at him. "Jack's as big as you are, and if I tell him to he'll break every bone in your body."

"To the devil with Jack," said Jessop equably. "He's all right. I've nothing against him. What I mean is that he won't want you after you've been living up her with me for two weeks."

The ringing scornful insolence of her laughter! "He'd know that I was safer from you than ever after looking at your ugly face for a fortnight."

Jessop grinned across his solitaire board at her. "Safe or not safe, you mind me. He nor any other man won't want you after you've been here all this time with me."

"Wouldn't you, if things had happened this way with me, and it was one of the other boys?" she flashed.

"Oh, Lord, yes!" he said carelessly, "I'd be glad to get you any kind of a way. I ain't making conditions."

"Bah!" Alma tapped her foot and preened herself, looking down at him from heights of scorn. "Everyone knows how you've been running after me for two years. They know, too, that I wouldn't even look at you. None can blame me for this. It is an accident sent by your friend, the devil."

"Do you think that's going to make any difference?" he asked. "I'm telling you straight, Alma, when I tell you that there ain't a thing for you to do but marry me."

"You!"—her hands on either side of her round waist, her eyes looking down at him through her long black lashes in sparkling rage—"I've chosen a good man. Do you think that I would marry a devil like you?"

"Listen!" Alma leaned forward and pounded in one open palm with the other hand clinched in a fist. "If Jack went back on me; if my father would drive me out into the mountains to die and be eaten of coyotes; if you were the last, the very last man in the world, I would not marry you. I would go into a convent first!"

"You! In a convent!" He took his pipe from his mouth and the walls echoed his laughter.

This was almost the last conversation between them, for Alma relapsed into one of her silent moods, and Jessop spent much time down by the mountain of snow, watching its almost magical vanishing.

"They'll be swinging some sort of an old plank across the ravine to-day, Alma," he said at breakfast, a morning or two later. "Let's go down and look on."

But Alma shrank. "I won't come," she said sullenly. "There will be a crowd. The whole camp will be there to stare at me. Pop and Jack can come and find me."

Jessop tapped the table a moment or two in silence. "Better go, Alma," he said at last. "It'll look better for you, the more anxious you are to get shut of me and this."

But Alma only glowered in dark obstinacy.

About noon Alma, gazing for the hundredth time from the window, gave a little cry, "Jack and pop!" and rushed to the door, leaving it open behind her. Like a bird she flew over the threshold and would have thrown herself into her father's arms, but he caught her wrists and pushed her back a step or two, anything but gently.

"Why wasn't you down at the bridge?" he asked sternly. The old man had changed in this fortnight. There were anxious puckers about his eyes, which were at once brighter and more sunken than ever. His parchment skin looked livid and lifeless, and his mouth had tightened until it was drawn in and pinched.

"Why wasn't you down at the gully waiting for us?" he asked again, "hiding up here in that cabin like you'd as lief stay there as not? What do you suppose the camp thinks of you now?"

"Yes, Alma, why wasn't you at the bridge?" echoed the great, blonde, handsome Swede beside him. His tone was appealing, puzzled, hurt.

Alma looked at him a moment in frowning, puzzled incomprehension; from Tillotson to her father she glanced and then back again. Then, as the meaning of their attitude flashed over her, she fell back a pace or two from them, swaying a little, her face grown white as the truth of Jessop's hateful prophecies surged over her in waves of bitterness. "Dios!" she muttered with stiff lips, a sob rising in her throat. The loyalty she had never doubted, had leaned against as if it were an oak, was but a broken reed.

One moment she despaired hopelessly, a brief moment. Then she tossed high her head in hot resentment. Her mouth was set in a thin, scarlet line of obstinacy, her eyes burned, but their expression was unreadable. With a slow movement of her body, expressing infinite scorn, she swung away from her father and lover, and with her eyes upon the far horizon superbly ignored them.

"Oh, Alma, my Alma, don't act this way," pleaded her lover, his voice broken with emotion. "Why wasn't you at the gully? Wouldn't he let you?" He pointed a finger at Jessop, who stood a little apart watching the scene with folded arms, his pipe thrust between his teeth. "Oh, Alma"—his voice wavered and trembled—"why don't you answer your pop? Ain't you just as good as when you come?"

But Alma's seven or seventeen devils were all in full possession of her now. Petted, spoiled child that she was, she could not bear to be thus treated, chidden and questioned, where she had expected a rapturous welcome, and one of the seven devils, a newly acquired one, the demon of silence, stood her in good stead. She rightly divined that this attitude of non-explanation would prove far more maddening to her inquisitors than the vials of her wrath poured freely upon them.

But although her father's silence was as grim and unbroken as her own, Tillotson continued to plead. "Oh, Alma, ain't you the same? Just tell us, ain't you the same?" Until at last, driven to fury by his bleat, she dropped her pose of insolent indifference and proud defiance, and whiling suddenly about, scorched him with her glance.

"How can I be the same when I been living up here two weeks with Bill Jessop?" she flashed.

Tillotson sprang toward Jessop, but Gallito's hand had shot out and caught him by the arm with a grip of steel, holding him back, and the Swede threw his hands over his face and sobbed and trembled all over his big frame.

"Good Lord, Alma!" Jessop strode angrily forward, his face white, heavy creases between his brows. "What the devil you queerin' yourself this way for?"

Her father looked at him, a slow and bitter smile about his lips, then he gave a little nod of acrid comprehension. Tillotson dropped his hands from his face, his gray eyes blazed through his tears, and again he made as if to spring at Jessop and again the old man held him with those long, lean, bloodless fingers from which age had taken nothing of their grip.

"You keep out of this, Bill Jessop," he said in a low, cold, deadly voice. "This is between the girl and us. I'll settle with you later. Alma, you answer the question that was asked you. Are you the same as when you left, or not?"

Moments passed, and still Alma had not obeyed that parental command. It was not repeated, which was characteristic of Gallito. He merely waited until at last Alma lifted her eyes, eyes so like his own, and unwaveringly met his gaze.

"Am I the same? No, I ain't," she said clearly.

Jessop made a step toward her with protesting, out-thrown hands as if to stop her. Then, evidently thinking better of it, he stood negligently with folded arms.

Gallito had dropped his hand from Tillotson's arm. The time for emotion as well as for further interrogation was gone. All three men recognized that. This was the moment for action. Still in his slow, cold voice, he said to Tillotson, with not another glance at Alma, "This is mine; but you'll probably get a shot at him," and reached back to his hip pocket.

"Look her, Gallito," cried Jessop, still with his arms folded, "I ain't afraid of either you or Tillotson. I don't care a darn how soon you begin to shoot. I ain't even got my gun with me, but I been cleaning and loading it all morning, and if you two don't put air through me out here, I'm going back to the cabin and finish the job myself; 'cause I won't stay here without her. For some reason—God knows what—she's stringin' you both. I've asked her to marry me more than once since she came here, but she wouldn't hear of it."

The Spaniard, unheeding him, lifted the pistol and took steady aim.

"Put up that gun, pop." Alma's voice was lifted in imperious command as she stepped lightly between Jessop and himself. "There won't be any shooting around here until I say what I got to. Ain't men the fools?" Hands on her hips, the color back in her cheeks, the light in her eyes, her mercurial spirits apparently restored, she swung her skirts and surveyed Tillotson and her father, a half humorous mockery in her slanting gaze. "You prancing up her trying to show off, and ready to smirch my good name in the camp by shooting holes in Bill Jessop! A nice trick! And you, pop, to go bringing that suspicious lump of dough with you!" A contemptuous tilt of her elbow toward Tillotson. "And letting him ask me such questions! Do you think I'd take it from either of you? My Lord! I don't see how the pair of you's ever going to hold up your heads again." And now her glance softened, her head lifted higher yet, her voice rang out exultantly. "Bill Jessop would never ask me whether I was good or bad and no man that's got any sense would dare to. 'Are you the same?'" mimicking their voices. "No, I ain't. I told you the truth when I said that. Nothing's the same. Look around you. This is a new earth and I'm new, too. For now, I can go down"—her voice had sunk almost to a whisper and her lashes lay on her flushing cheek—"I—I don't want to."

Jessop was beside her in two strides. "Alma," he cried, "what in the name of all the saints are you saying? Alma!"

She lifted her radiant face to his, and leaned toward him with all the allurement, the softness and sweetness of the South in her voice and eyes. "I—want to stay here now," she murmured; "I love you, Bill."

And this time, the flower of Spain unresistingly, joyously, adorned the coat of Irish frieze.

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Oct. 10.—Bearish sentiment took possession of the grain trade today as a result of the government crop report. December wheat started at 92⅛c to 93¾c and fell to 92¼c.

The close was steady at 92¼c for December, a net loss of 1⅛c.

Corn also weakened. December opened at 53¾c to 53½c and dropped to 53⅛c.

In oats also the ruling influence came through the government report. December started at 32⅝c to 32½@32⅝c and sagged to 32¼@32⅜c.

Provisions suffered a backset with grain. First sales with January delivery went at $19.75 to $19.80 for pork, $11.22½ to $11.25 for lard and $10.40 for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

New York, Oct. 10.—Further selling of stocks, based on the foreign situation, attended the opening dealings on the exchange today. The special features of weakness were Union Pacific, Great Northern, Ore, Missouri Pacific and Canadian Pacific. Coalers were stronger, Reading still rising a point.

Such strength as today's market manifested after its early heaviness was generally attributed to the promise held out by yesterday's crop report, which exceeded all expectations. This favorable factor was offset, however, by renewed selling for Europe. Bonds were steady.

The market closed irregular.

THE MONEY MARKET.

CHILDREN THERE DURING HEARING

Four Tots in Court Room While Henry Hay is Before Jury.

MAKING HARD FIGHT

Four children, the youngest a babe in arms and the oldest not more than seven, were present in the circuit court room today during the trial of their father, Henry Hay, who is charged with criminal assault upon the complaint of Alfred Smead, whose daughter, Sadie, is the chief witness for the state.

Hay lives at Elkhart and came here to visit at Smead's and during his visit it is charged that he committed the crime for which he is on trial. He is making a hard fight and directed his proof in the first place to indicate that the girl is sixteen and above the age of consent. He was arrested with her in a coal shed along the Nickel Plate track after he had tried, it is charged, to buy drinks for her at the Palm garden and had been refused.

Charges He Didn't Provide.

Neva Phillips charges in her divorce complaint against Arthur L. Phillips that he failed to provide for her and that shortly after their marriage in December, 1910, she was compelled to work for her own living. They separated last July. She also says he struck her and abandoned her. McAdams & Hartzell are her attorneys.

Conductor Asks for Damages.

Pursel Landrie, a conductor in the employ of the Fort Wayne and Northern Indiana Traction company, has filed suit in the superior court asking $3,000 for personal damages caused, it is charged, by the carelessness of the employes of the Hannan-Hickey Brothers Construction company.

He says that on Sept. 12, of this year, a rope was left dangling from the elevated tracks at Broadway and that it caught the trolley rope of a car on which he was working, threw him to the street, cut a gash in the back of his head and inflicted severe internal injuries. Breen & Morris represent him.

Notes of the Courts.

A motion for a new trial of the suit in which W. F. Carpenter obtained a verdict for $13,000 against John Suelzer has been asked by Suelzer's attorneys.

Charging failure to provide, Mary Dillon has entered a suit for divorce against Frank Dillon. Somers & Kennerk represent her.

Charging that Dr. Bud Sweringen refused to make an examination of May Wilson, who filed a suit for personal injuries against the Moellering Construction company until his fees had been paid, Emrick & Emrick have asked that he be cited for contempt.

Many Applicants Seek Membership in Court of Honor.

Mrs. E. L. Drishell, district manager of the Court of Honor, attended the regular meeting of the local court last evening. She will remain in the city for some time. Last night's session was well attended and a number of applications for membership were received. Mrs. Drishell will have charge of a class to be received next Wednesday night.

MEETS OLD COMRADES.

James Liggett Here to Act as Government Guager.

James Liggett arrived in Fort Wayne this morning from Chicago and will act as United States guager for this district until late in November. He succeeds Guager Crawley, who was transferred the first of the month to Newcastle, Ind.

Mr. Liggett is well known in Fort Wayne, a former police chief, and is a veteran of the civil war. He attended the thirteenth annual reunion of the 75th and 101st regiments held last week at Huntington. While there he met one of his old army bunkmates, John G. Thompson, of Kansas City, whom he had not seen for forty-nine years.

"One of the greatest pleasures I have known," said Mr. Liggett, "was the meeting with another comrade, Mike Dennis. He was shot through the thigh during the battle of Chickamaugua, and I carried him from the fighting line. I had not seen him for nearly fifty years, and when we met at Huntington, we recognized each other."

MARRIAGE LICENSES.

Martin L. Westenfeld, 26, clerk, and Dorothy M. Parrish, 23.

MILLIEE CHRISTINE DEAD.

Famous Twin Freak of Human Anatomy No More.

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 10.—Millie Christine, said to be the greatest twin freak of human anatomy, exhibited all over the world, once presented to Queen Victoria, and possessing apparently two separate and distinct beings with one body, died yesterday at the old homestead in Columbus county, this state, where they were borne in slavery and were subsequently educated and exploited in many countries, a puzzle to scientists and anatomists. They were born to negro parents and died within a few hours of one another, aged about sixty years.

FRAUD ALLEGED AT TERRE HAUTE

Court Orders Investigation of Registration by Grand Jury.

OTHER INDIANA NEWS

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 10.—Judge Charles M. Fortune of the circuit court yesterday afternoon instructed the grand jury to make a full investigation of the alleged unlawful registrations which have aroused the entire population of the county.

The court instructed them to act fearlessly and to show no favors and to indict those to whom the evidence of guilt should point.

Enno Harms, inspector of the tenderloin registration place, was locked up by the sheriff yesterday for failing to report for trial to answer to the indictments which had been returned against him by the June grand jury for false registration.

John W. Tierney, known as the "Hinky Dink" of Terre Haute, who has been leading the Roberts-Fairbanks faction in the tenderloin, has announced that he is done with the gang and probably will turn state's evidence. He has made a public statement in which he threatens the exposure.

SHELBYVILLE DOCTOR TAKEN.

Arrested on Warrant Charging Practicing Medicine Without License.

Shelbyville, Ind., Oct. 10.—On a bench warrant issued by Judge Blair in the circuit court Dr. A. M. Farnsworth of this city has been arrested on a charge of practicing medicine without a license. Dr. Farnsworth has been practicing osteopathy here for the last year. The affidavit against him was made by Dr. W. T. Gott of Crawfordsville, secretary of the state board of medical registration and examination. The case will be made a test one in Indiana, as there has been a controversy for several years regarding the manner in which the osteopaths practice. Dr. Spaunburst of Indianapolis, also a member of the state board, is the acknowledged leader of the osteopaths in this state and from his offices in Indianapolis has been conducted branch offices in many cities for the last six years. Each office is in charge of an undergraduate student, who is allowed to practice under the student exemption clause of the medical act, and Dr. Farnsworth has been giving treatment here in accordance with this feature of the law.
